50 Pct. Cut In Arms Aid Just Misses Being Voted

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

In its first test yesterday, the Administration's $1,450,000,000 foreign arms program barely escaped a $580,495,000 cut in the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

On a tie vote of 8 to 8, the committee defeated an amendment by Representative Richards (D., S. C.) for a 50 per cent reduction in the proposed $1,160,990,000 weapons aid for western European members of the North Atlantic Treaty.

Richards is the second-ranking Democrat on the committee. All but one or two of the other votes supporting his amendment were believed to have been cast by Republicans.

Vote at Closed Session

Although the committee has 25 members and full attendance might have changed the vote either way, the near success of the attempted slash was a striking demonstration of divided Congressional views on approving the program as drafted.

The vote, taken in closed session, made it virtually certain there will be further attempts to cut the requested amount in committee. The fact that the amendment was sponsored by a Democrat underscored the rough road ahead.

Committee Chairman Kee (D., W. Va.) said he still was "hopeful," however, the full sum would be approved. He forecast final House committee action Monday.

A move in the Senate to have Gen. Douglas MacArthur return from Japan to testify on the arms bill yesterday brought from President Truman the comment that MacArthur, overseas since before the war, is free to return when he chooses.

General MacArthur and Vice Admiral Oscar C. Badger would be requested formally to return to his country under a motion Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) introduced in the joint Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committee, which is conducting Senate hearings on the arms bill.

Vote Scheduled Today

Proponents of new arms aid for Nationalist China believe their testimony would bolster their effort to have China included in the bill, now limited to Western Europe, Greece, Turkey, Iran, Korea and the Philippines.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), who heads the joint committee, said a vote on the motion will be taken at 2 p. m. today. He said he personally opposes it because it would cause "misunderstanding and confusion" among Far Eastern peoples.

Knowland claims sufficient support to win his motion.

General MacArthur, it is believed, will not leave Japan until a peace treaty is signed, unless he receives a direct order. President Truman indicated at a White House press conference that the initiative will have to come from MacArthur.

Roly Stephenson, the salesman, stopping at the Harrington Hotel, reported to police yesterday that thieves took 12 cases, containing 240 left shoes, from his car parked near 9th and E sts. nw. He sells for the General Shoe Co., Nashville, Tenn.

There aren't, police said, enough one-legged men who have lost their right limbs to make the theft profitable. Stephenson valued the shoes at $100.

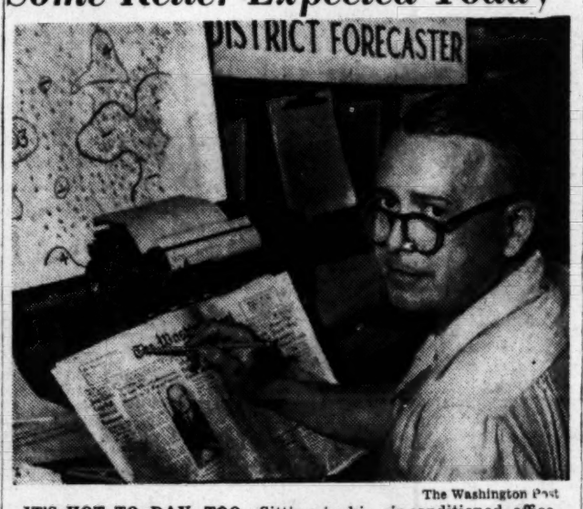
Season Heat Record Set at 97; Some Relief Expected Today



The Washington Post

IT'S HOT TO DAY, TOO—Sitting in his air-conditioned office, Weatherman Wilfred P. Day points to the weather "ear" of yesterday's Washington Post and scowls, "Of course it's hot, but why does everybody blame me?"

The heat reached a record high mark for the season yesterday in Washington, touching 97 degrees twice, at 3:50 p. m. and 5 p. m.

However, some relief was anticipated for today by the forecaster, who made a prediction it will be "partly cloudy, with possibility of scattered showers, not so warm in the afternoon."

The forecaster informally estimated a high of 92 degrees today, as result of the expected movement southeastward of a cool air mass from Canada.

Eight persons were taken to hospitals in the District yesterday as a result of the heat, and approximately 35,000 Federal and District Government workers were dismissed from jobs in non-air-conditioned buildings.

Use of parks was stepping up, according to Lieut. Alton E. Havens, of Park Police, with the number of all-night sleepers increasing each night through the past four nights.

The temperature yesterday reached a low of 75 degrees at 5:18 a. m., but soared rapidly after the sun made its effects felt. Between 8 and 11 a. m., the mercury climbed nine degrees. It reached 92 at noon, and was at 94 by 1 p. m.,

All Escape Plane Crash In Maine

Portland, Me., Aug. 11 (AP).—A Northeast Airlines plane from Boston crashed and burned at Municipal Airport tonight. Everyone aboard—24 passengers and 3 crew members—escaped safely.

The line's office at the field said the two-engined ship would be a complete loss. "The left wing's gone and the rest is burning," an employe said.

Byron Israelson, a Portland Press Herald reporter who was at the airport, said the plane hit the north-south runway "with a jolt."

"As it settled down there was a scraping noise, as if the landing gear collapsed. A shower of sparks rose from the plane and then it burst into flames."

Passengers and crew got out a rear emergency door, jumping about two feet to the ground. The regular exit was jammed shut.

A fleet of cabs, awaiting the plane's landing, drove out onto the runway and the drivers helped the passengers out.

Henry L. Taylor, a foreign service officer of the State Department, said he was looking out the window of the plane when it landed and "saw sparks."

75-Cent Wage Floor Voted by House, 361-35

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 361 to 35, the House yesterday passed a bill to increase the national minimum wage from 40 cents an hour to 75 cents, but at the same time removed approximately a million workers from under the wage-hour law.

The measure, forced through by a Republican-Southern Democratic coalition, resulted in only a partial victory for President Truman. The Chief Executive had made the 75-cent minimum a campaign pledge, but House action in removing large groups of workers from wage-hour protection may nullify much of its effect.

The House version, introduced by Representative Wingate H. Lucas (D., Tex.), was substituted for the Administration's measure Wednesday after a bitter floor fight.

The Administration's bill, sponsored by Chairman John Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the House Labor Committee, would have increased wage-hour coverage by about 600,000 workers. The law now covers approximately 20 million. President Truman had pledged not only to raise the minimum wage, but also to extend the act's coverage.

There is no definite figure on how many workers will be deprived of wage-hour protection under the House-passed bill. Wage-hour administration experts and House Labor Committee staff members agreed that no accurate figure could be given, but estimated the number would exceed one million.

The Lucas bill now goes to the Senate. Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) has tagged minimum wage as one of the "must" pieces of legislation on which the Senate must act before it adjourns.

Before the final roll call, the House refused 242 to 41 on a division vote to refer the matter back to the Labor Committee.

'On the Town' Actor Seized, Meridian Hill Play Cleaned Up

The musical comedy, "On The Town," showing at the open air theater at Meridian Hill Park, has been "cleaned up" as to script.

The dustoff of allegedly objectionable lines, including one reference to the Deity as preface to a "damn," were eliminated after arrest—and dismissal—of an actor.

Sergt. B. J. Beckman of Park Police made the arrest and Clark King, Corporation Counsel, engineered the dismissal. King said the District ought to have a censorship board to relieve his office of responsibility of passing on moral questions in plays.

In New York, "On The Town" was a lusty, noisy and sometimes rowdy show, according to reviewers.

Sergeant Beckman, representing Park Police, went to investigate complaints that language in the play was offensive to some members of the audiences.

He listened, Monday night, reported his findings to King on Tuesday, and was advised to warn the management to "clean up," King said. The warning was given, King said, before the Tuesday night performance, but apparently was too late to be transmitted to the actors with necessary changes in cues.

So Toney Matthews, one of the cast, purporting to be assembling prehistoric dinosaur bones, remarked of one bone that this is "too G—damn big." That did it. Sergeant Beckman went backstage and took Matthews to No. 13 Precinct and booked him for disorderly conduct. Matthews hastily posted $25 collateral and was back for his entrance in Act 2.

B-36 Can Hit Any Target, Generals Say

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Two top Air Force generals told Congress yesterday that the B-36 atomic bomber can hit any target in the world and that no nation has the defense to stop it.

Lieut. Gen. Curtis LeMay, present Strategic Air Force commander, and his predecessor, Gen. George C. Kenney, gave their testimony before the House Armed Services Committee.

The group is investigating "ugly rumors" that political pressure, rather than the B-36's merits caused the Air Force to cut back other orders and put the lion's share of its money in the B-36.

LeMay, whose planes would do the A-bombing in time of war, said his B-36's have actually practiced missions against the "most difficult targets" on simulated runs.

Both officers stoutly maintained that there is no night fighter in existence today that can intercept the big Consolidated-Vultee bomber at 40,000 feet. Kenney doubted if one could be developed to do the job within five years.

Out of Reach of Radar

"We can take off from here and bomb any target you want us to," said LeMay. "I doubt if an enemy would ever know it (the B-36) was there until the bomb hit."

At 40,000 feet, said the former commander of the Berlin Airlift, the bombers would be out of reach of an enemy's radar screen. However, despite darkness or overcast, he added, we could bomb accurately at such altitudes by new radar bombsights.

The B-36, LeMay declared, can "do anything," such as support Army ground troops.

So far the committee only has heard what Chief Counsel Joseph Keenan called "one side" of the B-36 and air-power controversy. But a promise of later rebuttal appeared yesterday when Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) brought in three Navy officers and gave them seats close to the counsel table.

They are Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, and the Navy's foremost advocate of carrier aviation; Capt. Arleigh A. (31-Knot) Burke, Pacific war hero, and Comdr. Thomas D. Davies, pilot of the Truculent Turtle and an expert on large naval bombers.

Radford, Vinson said, will sit in on the hearings and later take the stand to give his views on the broad air power controversy. One of the questions to be investigated by the group is whether cancellation of the Navy's super aircraft carrier United States and concentration on the B-36 as an A-bomb carrier was a wise decision. Radford is a stanch backer of the big flattop.

Kenney Changes His Mind

Members of the committee questioned both Kenney and LeMay on the performance of the B-36 and the ability of jet fighters to intercept them. Answers to most of the performance data queries were postponed until a later executive session, but both officers were firm in their stand that nothing could stop the big USAF bomber today.

Kenney, who until June, 1948, had "no faith" in the B-36 and wanted to make a flying tanker of it, said he'd completely changed his mind.

"We could send out 100 bombers to drop bombs at night and

ICC Expert Against CTC Stock Sale

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

The Capital Transit Co. stock control fight flared anew yesterday.

1—An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner recommended that a Florida group not be permitted to acquire control of the Washington firm.

2—An attorney for the Florida group promptly fired back that he will file exceptions early next week, questioning ICC jurisdiction in the case.

3—Efforts were redoubled here to organize a Washington group to bid for the 109,458 shares of Capital Transit stock that North American Co. must sell.

The ICC examiner, Vernon F. Baker, recommended in a five-page report that the commission reject an application by 37-year-old L. E. Wolfson and associates for authority to buy 46 per cent of the outstanding stock of Capital Transit for $2,189,160.

Experience Is Questioned

Baker said that none of the Florida applicants had experience in the type of transportation service that Capital Transit operates in Washington. He added that their residences "in places far removed from the territory" that Capital Transit serves led to the presumption that they "have no knowledge of or interest in the problems of the public in that territory."

The commission must still act formally on the examiner's recommendation. No early decision is possible, because the usual procedure allows for a 20-day period during which exceptions may be filed to an examiner's recommendation. Then the case must be held open another 10 days for possible replies to the exceptions.

John R. Turney, Washington attorney for the Wolfson group, asserted yesterday afternoon that his faction will file exceptions by early next week. He indicated that his grounds will be that the ICC's jurisdiction in the case is "very tenuous" and results "only from the fact that Capital Transit operates a few miles into Maryland."

Meanwhile, Attorney James O'Donnell, who is spearheading a Washington stockholder's group, said last night that in view of the ICC development, efforts will be redoubled "to fully organize a local syndicate to make a formal bid" to North American for the transit stock.

Report of Examiner

After reviewing the evidence placed before him at a hearing on July 22, Examiner Baker said in his report:

"None of the applicants (referring to Wolfson and his associates) is a carrier or in control of a carrier, but by the proposed transaction they would acquire control of two motor carriers which operate in interstate or foreign commerce, and thus the transaction is within the scope of . . . the (Interstate Commerce) Act and subject to the jurisdiction of this commission . . ."

In referring to two motor carriers, Baker emphasized that Capital Transit operates in nearby Maryland through Montgomery Bus Lines, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary.

Baker added: "Acquisition of control of these carriers (Capital Transit and Montgomery Bus Lines) by persons so unqualified by knowledge and experience, and whose sole purpose is to obtain a 'reasonable' return on their investment, would present definite haz-

The Human Heart

Artificial Heart Lends Hope Life Itself Can Be Prolonged

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

(Last of Six Articles)

Medical scientists may some day be adding encores to life itself with perfection of a piano-size machine, the artificial heart and lungs.

The machine, already 15 years in the making, is the inventive product of Dr. John H. Gibbon, jr., professor of surgery and director of surgical research at Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia.

Already it has taken over, on a relief basis, the heart and lung functions for dogs up to 46 minutes.

Surgeons agree that if the flow of blood through the chest organs could be stopped safely for 30 minutes a new field of heart surgery could readily develop. Dr. Gibbon has passed that time limit with dogs; the transition to humans promises to be a long, perhaps impossible step.

In an early progress report on animal experimentation with the machine, Dr. Gibbon wrote:

"It is hoped that the method (artificial maintenance of blood circulation) may eventually be perfected to such an extent that it may safely be employed on human beings. The difficulties do not seem to be insurmountable."

The report was written for publication after he and his associates had kept cats alive with the substitute heart for as long as 25 minutes, with survival after return to normal functions. Dr. Gibbon was even more cheerful last June in reporting his latest results with dogs to the annual meeting of the Society for Vascular Surgery, in Atlantic City, N. J.

Later, at an American Medical Association scientific session at the same city, Gibbon's machine was termed "the most promising development" in surgery's search for an artificial heart. The speaker was Dr. Alfred Blalock, of Baltimore, developer of the "blue" baby operation for malformed hearts.

Truman Tells Press His Own Attitude Toward General Remains the Same

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Albert J. Gross, a Milwaukee manufacturer, yesterday testified he shipped a deep-freeze unit to Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan and got a check for it from a company that employed John Maragon.

The revelation came before the Senate subcommittee investigating "5 per centers" or "influence peddlers" in Washington.

An hour or so later, at a White House news conference, President Truman said there had not been the slightest change in his attitude toward General Vaughan, his military aide. He has known Vaughan for 32 years and showed his fondness for him on the night of February 22 with a sensational 'S.O.B.' speech in his defense.

General Vaughan was missing from his usual place with the other aides at yesterday's news conference, but Mr. Truman grinned and told reporters it was not because Vaughan was afraid of them.

Manufacturer Gross said the deep-freeze unit he shipped to General Vaughan was one of several that came to Washington. Who got the others was not disclosed because further revelations were cut off pending a checkup.

In the gossip that sped through the committee room, the names of wives of top-level officials were mentioned.

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) warned his colleagues an "aroma of mystery" would be created unless the whole business was aired soon.

Gross did not say—nor did anybody else bring out—whether General Vaughan received or kept the freezer, which, according to the manufacturer, sold for either $390 or $520.

Gross had been called to testify about his past relationship with James V. Hunt, "management counselor" and central figure in the 5 per center inquiry. Hunt has been represented as saying he was one of Vaughan's closest friends.

Maragon, whose name came up again yesterday, has described General Vaughan as a "good friend."

Maragon was employed by the Albert Varley Co., of Chicago, which Manufacturer Gross said paid the bill for the deep-freeze unit sent to General Vaughan—and also for the others. The firm, which has offices also in New York and Paris, supplies essential oils to perfume and soap manufacturers

Gross did not say when the freezers were shipped.

Maragon worked for the Varley Co., from August 1, 1945, to late in 1947. Then he returned with the firm for a couple of months last autumn and travelled to Europe for it.

Asked last night about Gross' statement concerning General

Ecuador Town Drops 1500 Ft. In Earthquake

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 11 (AP).—A country doctor from Brea, Calif., today told how it looks after last Friday's earthquake swallowed a town and buried 600 villagers in a mile-wide pit more than 1500 feet deep.

He is Dr. C. Glenn Curtis, who heads a joint United States-Ecuador public health project.

"It was the most astounding thing I ever saw," Curtis said. "For an area of perhaps a mile or more in diameter on a mountain plateau the earth simply sank down.

"This produced a tremendous landslide which buried the village, La Libertad, completely.

"There were no known survivors in the village . . .

"The whole valley grew much sugar cane and for hundreds of acres the ground was churned up so violently by the quake that it somehow left the growing cane with roots upward."

Dr. Curtis said the highway leading from Pelileo to La Libertad and Patate was turned a full right angle and ended at a precipice where the sink produced the landslide.

A priest buried four days in the ruins of the Ambato Cathedral has been brought out alive, reports said today.

Father Juan Bautista Palacious was in the big Cathedral Friday, teaching 50 catechism students, when the earthquake leveled the building. All the students were killed but a supporting arch fell across the priest's body, shielding him from the big stones of the crumbled building.

Van Horn Quits Committee Post

Ezra Van Horn yesterday resigned as chairman of the wage negotiating committee of the Northern and Western soft coal producers, reportedly because of his $35,00-a-year job of the United Mine Workers welfare fund.

The operators, who are now in session with representatives of the mine workers at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., merely announced that the resignation had been accepted "with regret."

Joint Chiefs Get Bradley As Chairman

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday nominated Gen. Omar N. Bradley to be the first chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under the revamped unification act.

At the same time Mr. Truman made public a letter to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, now president of Columbia University, expressing thanks for having served as temporary chairman of the Joint Chiefs. The President said Eisenhower "responded like the good soldier you are" when asked to take the job and added that "the chiefs have made outstanding progress since you became their presiding officer."

Nomination of Bradley to the highest military post in the Nation leaves vacant the office of Chief of Staff of the Army. Mr. Truman said yesterday he was not ready to announce Bradley's successor, although educated guessers have for some time picked Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Vice Chief of Staff, for the job.

After announcing Bradley's nomination at his regular news conference, Mr. Truman said he had nominated Admiral Louis E. Denfeld to continue as Chief of Naval Operations for another two years. The third member of the Joint Chiefs, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg of the Air Force, appointed in April, 1948, still has nearly three years to serve.

Under the new Unification Act, Bradley will serve two years, if confirmed by the Senate, and will be eligible for one reappointment. Although he would have no vote in the Joint Chiefs under the act, and would not be advanced in rank, he would take precedence over all other officers of the armed services.

Born 56 years ago in Clark, Mo., Bradley became known as the "GI's general" during World War II when he commanded the Twelfth Army Group in Europe and spent much time with troops at the front. During that time, he commanded more than 1,300,000 men, the greatest concentration of American soldiers ever to serve under one field commander.

Brought back by President Truman in August, 1945, to head the Veterans Administration during the demobilization period, he nursed that huge organization through one of its most trying periods. Bradley became Chief of

Orme Returns to Police Post In Montgomery on Saturday

Charles M. Orme, suspended since last Friday as chief of the Montgomery County police force, will be restored to duty as chief effective Saturday noon.

This was announced last night by County Manager Irving G. McNayr after receipt of a letter from Orme in which the chief apologized for remarks that were said to have reflected on the policies of the manager and the county council.

Orme was suspended after a statement he made to reporters in which he said he doubted the efficiency of the one-man police car system recently started by the council upon McNayr's recommendation.

Reinstatement action was taken at a meeting last night between McNayr and County Council members in McNayr's Rockville office.

In the letter of apology, Orme said in part: "I have reached the conclusion that I should not have made the statement to the newspaper reporters for which I was released from duty.

"I did not realize when I stated my personal views concerning the use of one-man police cars in the daytime that this might be construed as a condemnation of your action and that of the council in establishing that system.

"But in view of what happened, I now see that my statement to the newspapers could be so construed. I regret very much that I made the statement I did and I wish to acknowledge that I shouldn't have made it and to apologize to you and the Council

'Gone With Wind' Author Seriously Injured by Auto

Atlanta, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Margaret Mitchell, who wrote "Gone With the Wind," was injured critically tonight when struck by an automobile.

Miss Mitchell

Police said Miss Mitchell was taking an evening stroll near her home when she was struck.

The driver, Hugh D. Gravitt, 29, was booked on charges of drunk driving. Gravitt is a cab driver but was driving his own car at the time.

Officers said Gravitt's car skidded 67 feet and struck Miss Mitchell.

Van Horn Is Ousted As Chief Negotiator

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Ezra Van Horn was resigned today as chairman of the negotiating committee of the Northern and Western soft coal producers, reportedly because of his $35,000-a-year job as trustee of the United Mine Workers welfare fund.

The operators merely announced that Van Horn had offered his resignation from Washington and that it had been accepted "with regret." They said that Frank R. Amos, vice president of the Pittsburgh Consolidated Coal Co., had been named temporarily to succeed him.

But other sources said the operators had demanded his resignation because of the disclosure that he was accepting $35,000 a year as the operator's trustee for the United Mine Workers pension and welfare fund.

The development came as the operators mapped an "all-out" fight to end the abbreviated three-day work week imposed on the soft coal industry by UMW President John L. Lewis. There was crystalizing sentiment for a complete shutdown of the soft coal pits next Monday to force Lewis' hand.

The fact that Van Horn was accepting a salary as trustee was revealed before a United States Senate subcommittee last week by Josephine Roche, director of the fund. She said that Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) is accepting a similar salary as public trustee. Lewis receives no pay, she said.

Both Van Horn and Lewis were absent today as the mine workers resumed contract talks with the Northern and Western commercial producers after a recess of several weeks.

The operators contend that their obligation to honor the old contract with Lewis runs out next Sunday. That is the sixtieth day after Lewis filed notice under the Taft-Hartley law that the contract was due to expire.

Some of the biggest operators in the group feel that they will be free on that date to end their current 20-cent-a-ton contributions to the union welfare fund, which is used to pay pensions and welfare benefits to aged miners.

One industry spokesman estimated that half the soft coal pits may be shut down Monday. The miners stopped digging last night as the sixth of the abbreviated work weeks came to an end.

$293 Million

Rails Given Go-Ahead on Freight Hike

By The Associated Press

The railroad industry yesterday got the go-ahead signal for another 293 million dollars a year increase in freight rates.

The authority was issued by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which said the increase was intended to aid the railroads in setting up a 40-hour week for non-operating employes. The shorter work week for these employes becomes effective September 1, under an award by a presidential arbitration board.

The ICC said it estimated the 40-hour week will cost the rail lines about 380 million dollars a year.

The commission acted on the basis of a rail petition of last October 1 for authority to advance rates by 13 per cent, in view of mounting operating costs in which wage adjustments figured as a principal item. On the rail plea that an emergency existed, they received authority for interim increases of about 5 per cent in December, to be collected while the over-all petition was being considered.

Yesterday's order made the interim increases permanent and added another average 4 per cent. The industry thus fell short by about 4 per cent of what it had asked for.

The carriers were authorized to make the changes in rates effective within 15 days—that is, just before the 40-hour week goes into effect. Domestic water carriers were given permission to make the same advances at the same time, to preserve traditional relationships.

With yesterday's authority, post-war freight rate increases amount to about 50 per cent, involving some $3,000,000,000 a year.

With the increase, it denied a motion by the Secretary of Agriculture and other shipping interests that the ICC investigate the efficiency of railroad operations before permitting in advance.

The new rate increase will not apply to iron ore handled on the upper Great Lakes, or to railroad protective services, such as refrigeration.

Advances will be held to specified maximums on a limited number of commodities.

Rail, Timber Spokesmen Criticize Short Week

By The Associated Press

Two timber operators and a spokesman for the railways told a Senate committee yesterday the three-day work week in the coal mines is hurting their business.

They testified before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, which is investigating charges of monopoly practices by labor unions, with special interest in the three-day week ordered by John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union.

'New Social Order'

Steel Brands Inquiry Setup 'Revolution'

CLARENCE B. RANDALL
Steel magnate hot

New York, Aug. 11 (AP).—A keynoter for the Nation's big steel companies today characterized President Truman's creation of the steel fact-finding board as an "industrial revolution" that ultimately would lead to nationalization of industry.

Clarence B. Randall of Chicago, president of Inland Steel Co., attacked the President's action as the companies began presenting their case to the board. He spoke for his own company, but also was the keynoter for the entire industry. The union side of the controvery was presented last week.

(In Washington, President Truman told a news conference that fact-finding boards have been operating for 15 or 20 years and that there was nothing unusual in his appointing this one.)

Randall rejected all demands of the CIO Steel Workers Union, which argued for a 30-cent-an-hour package including wage, pension and insurance benefits.

The three-man board, headed by Prof. Carroll B. Daughterty of Northwestern University, will make findings of fact and recommendations in its report to the President on the contract dispute between the union and the industry. The report is due August 30, but its findings are not binding.

"When the President announced the formation of this board, he was in fact announcing an industrial revolution in American," Randall declared.

"By doing so, he has declared himself as favoring a new social order, and one so different from that under which our magnificent production record has been achieved that unless the process is stopped, and stopped at once, there will be no possibility of turning back.

"Through this means, whether he knew it or not, he has proclaimed that wages shall be fixed by the Government. This step is always the first one taken by those who set out to establish a socialist or corporative state.

"The fixing of profits comes next, and then when incentive is killed and production falls, the final step of nationalization follows."

Union at Ford Votes 7 to 1 For Walkout

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP).—A whopping strike vote today gave the CIO United Auto Workers a free hand in calling a Ford walkout.

UAW President Walter Reuther said, however, there would be no immediate strike. Contract talks will continue for a while at least.

In the State-conducted strike vote, Michigan Ford employes rolled up a 7-1 majority for a walkout. This handed the UAW extra ammunition to back up its drive for pensions.

Ford Motor Co. said the returns did not alter its position. The company has refused during two months of bargaining to consider any wage increase.

The union's international executive board met today to act on election results. It was expected to authorize union officers to order Ford's 106,000 hourly workers out whenever they see fit. Reuther said, however, no announcement on the board's action would be forthcoming today.

Michigan law made the election necessary. The UAW could not legally call a walkout in the vital Michigan plants, which employ more than 80,000, until a favorable vote had been obtained.

The huge total of 75,230 ballots cast came as a surprise. It was 93 per cent of eligible voters.

The final count listed 65,001 for a strike and 9549 against in 17 Michigan plants. Officials set aside 680 ballots.

Cotton Quota Bill Approved By Conferees

By The Associated Press

Senate and House conferees agreed yesterday on a bill to apply production controls to cotton if farmers by a two-thirds vote approve such restrictions.

Under the measure, acreage quotas would be based on the amount of land which has been in cotton during the immediately preceding five years, except that this year's crop never shall be used in the calculations.

Because the 1949 crop is excluded, the 1950 quotas would be based on production records of 1945 through 1948, only a four-year period.

The Secretary of Agriculture each year would review the cotton supply and demand situation as of July 31, determine whether production controls are needed and submit the question to farmers in a national referendum.

He would proclaim quotas if cotton supplies are found to exceed normal. Normal would be calculated by taking the estimated domestic consumption figures, the expected exports and adding to these 30 per cent more as an allowable "caryover" reserve.

Should more than one-third of the farmers reject production quotas, they would not be put into force. In that event, they would get no price supports on their crop.

The acreage control bill does not provide for price supports. These would be provided by legislation which has passed the House and is now pending in the Senate. The House version calls for support on cotton at 90 per cent of parity.

Hawaii Plans Strike Ban

Honolulu, Aug. 11 (AP).—The territorial Senate was working today on a bill for permanent outlawing of strikes and picketing against the Government.

The bill also would ban secondary boycotts and union "hot cargo" action against government operations. In general, it would make permanent such provisions of the emergency Dock Seizure Act, whereby the territorial government is attempting to end the present stevedore strike. The seizure act, putting the government in the stevedoring business, is good for only 180 days.

The strike by the 2000 stevedores of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union has tied up Hawaiian shipping for 103 days.

The union has defied the government operation plan and announced it would challenge constitutionality of the act in court.

Governor Ingram M. Stainback has ordered seizure of the facilities of the seven struck stevedoring companies, and the government now is hiring men in preparation for loading and unloading ships. The harbor board reported today it had signed up 815 and was interviewing other applicants with a view of hiring about 1500 altogether. It is offering the pre-strike wage of $1.40 an hour. The strikers went out May 1, demanding $1.72 an hour.

RFC Powers Expansion Is Opposed

By The Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board threw its weight yesterday against a proposal, suggested by President Truman, to expand the lending powers of the Government's Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The board, with no apparent dissent among its seven members, remarked that the RFC, established in 1932 as an emergency organization, "should continue to be regarded as essentially of an emergency character."

Mr. Truman's proposal would do away with the time limit for repayment of RFC loans—now 10 years—and would double the present limit of $2,500,000,000 on total RFC loans.

A bill to make these changes was introduced by Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate Banking Committee.

President Truman said in his recent economic report that the maximum maturity of REC's business loans should be extended to aid ventures which require long periods to reach a profit-making stage.

The reserve board cited the presidential suggestion — one of a number of so-called anti-recession actions proposed by Mr. Truman—in a letter to a Senate Banking Subcommittee holding hearings on the Maybank bill. Then the board added:

"It is the view of the board that the present 10-year limitation on ordinary business loans by the corporation is entirely adequate . . .

"In the types of cases referred to by the President, the limitation could well be fixed at 15 years but should not be removed altogether."

The board said Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, a close friend of President Truman, also takes the view that there should be "regular amortization of loans having maturities in excess of 10 years."

The board added it was "in sympathy with the policy of stimulating employment at this time through encouragement of necessary financing of business enterprises, particularly small business."

Senate Group Approves Farm Compromise

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A compromise farm bill, entirely discarding the so-called Brannan Plan of "production payments," was agreed upon by a Senate Agriculture subcommittee yesterday.

The measure was approved unanimously by a group headed by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.). It would:

1. Provide for a sliding scale of price support for basic crops of from 75 to 90 per cent of parity. A commodity would have to be subject to full production controls to be eligible for top supports.

(The Aiken law—Section II of the present farm law—which goes into effect January 1 unless repealed, would provide for price supports from 60 to 90 per cent of parity—with a floor of 72 per cent on crops for which acreage controls and marketing quotas have been adopted.)

Assistant Secretary

2. Provide that support price levels for basic crops could not fall below 90 per cent for a full year after production controls have become effective.

3. Authorize appointment of an additional assistant secretary of agriculture "in charge of sales." It would be his job to dispose of all farm products acquired under the price support program.

Such products have cost the Treasury heavily. Many observers fear it will prove still more expensive in the future in view of large harvests. Potatoes alone have cost the taxpayers more than a third of a billion dollars in three years.

Anderson predicted the measure will be approved by the entire committee Saturday. A majority of that group was represented on the subcommittee that voted unanimously for it yesterday.

Bars "Two Knocks at Once"

Anderson told newsmen that the group felt it would be unfair to give the farmer "two knocks at once" by reducing price supports at the same time it voted production controls.

The bill differs from the farm bill passed by the House two weeks ago. That measure provided for rigid price supports at 90 per cent of parity for 18 commodities.

Last night some House farm leaders hinted the version suggested by the Senate committee might prove acceptable. However, Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.), author of the present law that both House and Senate measures would repeal, said the proposal may be in for "considerable revision."

The committee voted down a proposal to permit Brannan to test his plan on potatoes, wool, mohair and tung nuts. The Brannan Plan would permit non-storable, or perishable farm products to be sold in the open market. If that price should be below the support level, the Government would make up the difference to the grower in cash. At present the Government buys surplus commodities to hold up the retail prices.

Voting in Assembly Swung by Churchill

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 11 (AP). Winston Churchill, in a vigorous return to continental politics, won two victories today in the consultative assembly of the Council of Europe.

His candidate for assembly president, Socialist former Premier Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, was elected unanimously. Spaak, who looks enough like Churchill to be his brother, was first president of the United Nations Assembly in London and New York three years ago.

Churchill's second successful maneuver was made in opposition to the candidacy of William Whiteley, the Labor Government's parliamentary secretary of the British Treasury, for one of the assembly's four vice presidencies. Whiteley ran fifth in a field of six, being barely defeated by a British lord.

The assembly is the 12-nation formative group that hopes to become the parliament of Europe in a dreamed-of federation of continental states.

European Movement Backers

Churchill, President Spaak and four vice presidents all are ardent promoters of the European Movement. The vice presidents and the votes they received out of 98 cast are:

Francois de Menthon of France, 90; Stefano Jacini of Italy, 80; Ole Bjoern Kraft of Denmark, 78, and Lord Layton of Britain, 52.

Whiteley was five votes behind Layton, a British newspaper publisher, with 47. The sixth candidate, former Premier Eamon De Valera of Ireland, got 15 votes.

The 74-year-old wartime Prime Minister of Britain, who blasts at the Labor Government regularly as minority leader at home, told the assembly Whiteley was his friend and that he opposed the Laborite only because active government officials should be kept from the assembly chairmanship.

Herbert Morrison, British Deputy Prime Minister, charged the opposition to Whiteley was political and regrettable.

Churchill and other delegates opened up what appears to be a rebellion against powers held over the assembly by the Council's Committee of Foreign Ministers, or "Upper House" of this proposed federation.

Churchill himself led a strong attack on a rule requiring the assembly to ask committee permission to add to the agenda and do this within three days of a formal asembly opening.

Spaak got the asembly to agree on formation of a special committee to take this up with the ministers and try to modify the three-day rule.

When it became apparent that the Churchill-backed candidacy of Spaak was a sure bet, Spaak resigned in Brussels last night as Acting Premier and Foreign Minister. He previously had been Belgian Premier.

Steps Aiding Civilians in War Pledged

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 11 (AP).—Four Geneva conventions on the rules of war received final approval by a 60-nation conference today.

The conference adopted almost unanimously three revised agreements regulating the treatment of wounded soldiers and sailors and of prisoners of war and a new proposal on the treatment of civilians in occupied territory.

All four were based on drafts adopted by the Stockholm Red Cross Conference last year. The Geneva Conference was convened by the Swiss Government to work over the Stockholm drafts.

Civilians To Be Protected

Under the convention on the treatment of civilians, the population of an occupied country in a future war will be protected by recognized international law for the first time in history.

Although approved without opposition today, the conventions will be legally binding only on those countries which sign and ratify them later. A formal signing ceremony is scheduled in Geneva next September.

Many delegations, including those of the United States, the United Kingdom, Israel and the Communist bloc gave formal notice today of reservations they would make before signing.

Despite many differences over drafts, Communist and non-Communist delegations joined in approving the conventions and not one delegation cast a negative vote. Only Israel and Burma recorded abstentions.

U. S., Britain Make Reservations

The United States and the United Kingdom made express reservations on an article of the civilian convention which limits the right of an occupying power to impose the death penalty. Under this article, death sentences may be pronounced in an occupied country only if in accordance with the law of that country before the occupation began.

The Soviet Union and most of its satellites gave notice of reservations on several parts of the conventions, particularly an article of the prisoner-of-war convention dealing with war crimes.

Article 85 of the civilian convention says: "Prisoners-of-war prosecuted under the laws of the detaining power for acts committed prior to capture shall retain, even if convicted, the benefits of the present convention."

The Communist bloc made repeated but unsuccessful efforts throughout the conference to deprive "war criminals" of the benefits of the convention.

Omission Regretted

The delegate of the Holy See, Msgr. Paulo Bertoli, told the delegates he "deeply regretted" the omission of a preamble containing a declaration of religious principles. The conference dropped the preamble when it appeared likely a religious reference might lead the Soviet bloc to boycott the conventions.

The principal provisions of the new civilian convention will outlaw many of the occupation methods by the Germans during two World Wars. The taking of hostages, reprisals, torture and mass deportations are all expressly forbidden, and the occupation power is made directly responsible for feeding the civilian population.

Article 15 of the convention provides for the setting up of neutralized security zones near the fighting areas to shelter wounded combatants and noncombatants and any civilians taking no part in the fighting.

The military conventions for the first time recognize prisoner-of-war status for partisans and grant military medical personnel taken prisoner full freedom to care for their captured compatriots.

Navy Chief Warns Pilots on Buzzing Civilian Aircraft

By the United Press

Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, chief of naval operations, warned Navy pilots yesterday that they are liable to imprisonment and dishonorable discharge for "buzzing" civilian planes or residential areas.

The warning resulted from the July 30 collision between a Navy fighter and an Eastern Airliner near Fort Dix, N. J. The Navy pilot and all 15 persons aboard the commercial transport were killed. The Navy pilot reportedly was buzzing a light civilian plane before the collision.

Denfeld said that about 75 per cent of aircraft accidents could be attributed to pilot error. He added that existing safety regulations are "adequate" if pilots observe them.

U. S. Declares German Vote Is Anti-West

Berlin, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—An American Military Government spokesman tonight charged the intense nationalism of west German politicians had turned their first free election since Hitler's rule into an anti-Allied movement.

The spokesman, in a speech over the American zone's radio network, said, "One is forced to make comparisons with the past and to look with some anxiety to a future which is to be entrusted to such forgetful nationalistic people."

His statement was the first official American protest against the anti-Allied character the campaign has taken. The west German parliamentary elections will be Sunday.

The spokesman, who was not identified, said the various political parties seeking office had agreed on only one point—"a pronounced nationalism which sees all the right on one side and all the injustice and bad will on the other side.

"Not a single party, for example, has a good word for all the positive work the Western Allies have accomplished during the past four years in Germany."

Jews Blame U. S. Army For Riot

Munich, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—The Munich Jewish Committee today indirectly blamed American occupation forces for yesterday's two-hour riot in which a German policeman opened fire on Jewish refugees.

Five Jews and 20 policemen were injured.

The Jewish Committee's resolution declared Americans were responsible for the upsurge of "neo-fascism" in Germany.

"It is hard to believe that American occupation forces would allow provocations like this in spite of all their declarations against race hatred and for the preservation of human rights," the resolution said.

"None of us intend to stay any longer in this country. We do not want to stay on this soil stained with Jewish blood. We have our own country now. As long as we are forced to stay here we will use all our strength to fight any attempt at anti-Jewish provocations.

"We demand the instigators be punished."

The United States Military Governor for Bavaria, Murray D. Van Wagoner, said American officials are investigating the riot.

The fighting started when 50 German policemen appeared in Munch's Jewish quarter to stop a protest parade forming to march to the newspaper plant.

American Nations Send Stream Of Relief Goods to Ecuador

Quito, Ecuador, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Sister American republics led by the United States sent a swelling stream of relief supplies into this earthquake devastated country today.

Transport craft laden with medicines, plasma, food, tents, clothing and other equipment landed every few minutes at Quito and Guayaquil airports, which resembled small versions of Berlin's Tempelhof during the Airlift.

Ten C-47's of the United States Caribbean Command arrived from the Canal Zone at 10-minute intervals. Each carried some 4000 pounds of supplies. A total of 77,000 pounds is due from there alone, sent by the American Red Cross.

The shipment includes tents for about 3000 homeless, one of the most urgently needed items.

Thus far 17 other relief planes had arrived from South America and more were expected. Those already here included five from Venezuela; three each from Colombia and Panama proper; two each from Argentina and Brazil and one each from Peru and Uruguay.

An inter-American team of 70 doctors, nurses and technicians, including some from the United States Army staff, was working already in the disaster area.

Over the ruins of Pelileo and Patate, where earthquake destruction reached its climax, a vast cloud of dust hangs over crumbling mountainsides and buildings smashed to powder. Low visibility made it impossible to continue dropping food and medicines for the marooned survivors. All roads into the two towns remained impassable.

Helldivers Lead Greek Drive Against 7000 Red Guerillas

Kastoria, Greece, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Roaring Helldiver planes which once belonged to the American Navy spearheaded a big Greek army summer offensive against the Communist guerillas today in the neighborhood of the Albanian and Yugoslav borders.

Batteries of American 75-mm. recoilless artillery joined the planes in a bombardment of guerilla positions and communications.

A secondary offensive is in progress in the Grammos Mountains to the southwest against an estimated 5000 Communists.

A general staff communique, in the first report of the Vitsi campaign, said today government troops had captured Peak 1685, a strategically valuable height southwest of Florina.

Unofficial reports said several other peaks north of Kastoria had been taken by crack mountain troops.

Some of the best troops in the Greek army are in the Vistsi drive. They have tanks in addition to their 50 Helldiver fighter-bombers and their artillery.

It is reported reliably that Albania is concentrating regular army troops in the frontier area as a sort of "psychological booster" for the guerillas.

Conferees Stalled On Foreign Aid Bill

Senate and House members came out of conference yesterday completely deadlocked on any agreement over the multibillion dollar foreign aid program.

Each side stood firm on its version of the aid measure and were in dispute over every difference in the bill.

The conference will meet again this afternoon in another effort to reach some compromise which will break the money bill loose for a final vote in both houses.

House conferees refused even to discuss the Senate provision for $344,000 for a congressional watchdog committee to review foreign spending. Even before the Senate passed its bill, the House had voted 210-164 against such a provision. It was nearly unprecedented for one body to go on record in such a manner before a conference had been called for.

The House voted $3,568,470,000 to ECA for the current year—but agreed the money could be spent in 10½ months if necessary. The Senate voted $3,628,380,000 for ECA but for a full 12-month program.

Whooping Cough Gains In Gaithersburg Area

A larger than usual number of whooping cough cases in the Gaithersburg (Md.) area was reported yesterday by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, Montgomery County health officer.

He said he understood there were about 10 or 12 cases in that area thus far this month, but termed the outbreak "not an epidemic." For infants of less than one year the health officer said, whooping cough "is a serious disease" with a high mortality rate.

Freak Fall Burns Boy on Power Line

ROBERT F. WHEELER

A 12-year-old Chevy Chase, Md., boy fell from a limb of a tree yesterday, landed on a 4000-volt power line, and bounced back into the tree.

Robert F. Wheeler, 619 E. Thornapple st., was taken to Suburban Hospital with burns on his hands. His condition was reported as satisfactory.

The accident occurred in a tree near the Rock Creek Recreation Center, East-West hwy. at Beach dr. Members of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Rescue Squad and the Chevy Chase Fire Department said the boy was knocked unconscious by the jolt. He is the son of Dan H. Wheeler, an Interior Department employe.

50 Pct. Cut in Arms Aid Defeated by Tie Vote in House Group said he would not return of his own accord, according to the Associated Press. He was quoted as saying that his full views on the strategic situation in the Far East were in the hands of the Department of the Army.

A new compromise on the arms bill, aimed at overcoming objections that the bill will conflict with North Atlantic Treaty power, meanwhile, is under consideration in the Senate and State Department.

Senator Dulles (R., N. Y.) said he discussed with State Department officials a revision to permit the 12-nation North Atlantic Treaty Council, once it is set up, to have supervision over the proposed arms aid.

Dulles, a leading supporter of the treaty, opposes the arms measure in its present form, which would extend deliveries over a two-year period, but advocates some form of immediate aid.

"I want to superimpose it (the treaty council) on this program just as soon as it can be done intelligently," Dulles told reporters. But inasmuch as it has been estimated the council may not be established before 90 days, he said, "I don't want to do anything to delay deliveries."

Senator Johnson (D., Tex.) yesterday suggested the arms bill provide that the Atlantic Treaty council "concur" in the assistance action undertaken.

Dulles said he doubted the council would be equipped to "make that type of judgment in three months."

The State Department, it was understood, takes the view that governments should not recommend action to the council, but it should be the council that makes recommendations.

Averell W. Harriman, roving ambassador for the European Cooperation Administration and Henry F. Grady, Ambassador to Greece, yesterday appealed to the joint Senate Committee for approval of the full arms plan.

"The European nations are prepared, I am satisfied," Harriman said, "to contribute their share of self-help and mutual aid." Arming Western Europe will "immeasurably increase" United States security, he added.

"We face forces determined, ruthless and persistent" in the form of Russian power, he said. "These forces must be met with equal determination and perserverance."

Harriman was questioned sharply by Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who declared:

"You all proceed on the theory that unless the bill is taken as written it is equivalent to taking no action."

Vandenberg demanded to know why the Atlantic treaty council, when it meets, should "confront a two-year program unilaterally and externally to the pact . . . Why should this program not dovetail mechanically into the pact?

"What I am simply unable to find a persuasive answer to," said Vandenberg, "is why we cannot start in a preliminary way, and await the formation of the council . . . for long-range action."

Harriman replied he was "in no way minimizing the importance of integrated action" or seeking to weaken the treaty.

He said there has been previous testimony showing the arms involved are basic to any defense concert, and the full program is required to place contracts for weapons, which will take some time to produce.

Vandenberg protested, however, that the program leaders were making "bilateral" agreements with individual nations, while, he said, a "central multilateral body" is essential.

Harriman replied there has to be some form of agreement with each nation on use of the arms supplied. There is no conflict between the arms program and the treaty council, he argued, because the same people are concerned with both.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) noted, "I feel Senator Vandenberg's position should be given real consideration." Senator Smith (R., N. J.) said the treaty council should be given "a chance to operate," while Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) declared:

"I'm unable to see, all of a sudden, the terrific urgency with which this must be done."

Commented Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), "I get increasingly restless each time an aid program is presented, with the arguments that Europe will be become restless and therefore we must go forward . . . and we mustn't ask questions."

Cut Suggested

Senator Vandenberg has suggested that 50 per cent of the European portion of the program might be authorized in cash this fiscal year, and the balance in the form of contract authorizations for fiscal 1951—but he has not committed himself to a specific figure.

There was speculation the House might seek to adopt this formula instead of action similar to the defeated Richards amendment. Representative Kee, however, last night said that while he personally might favor this if necessary, he believes the House committee will act on the program on a straight cash basis.

Representative Richards told reporters that in opposing the full Administration program he wanted a bonafide one-year program and not one that extends deliveries over two years.

"I want to see some standardization, unification and cooperation" before extending the program any longer, he told reporters. "This would give us a chance to survey it before it is too late to change."

Husbands Scold if Wives Look Old

Try looking younger this very day—whether your husband scolds or whether you just want to please him. Thousands of wives thrilled, "youthified" by Ostrex. If you, too, look haggard, drawn, worn-out, OLD; aged by tired, rundown condition due solely to blood low in iron, try Ostrex Tonic Tablets today. See if new pep and prettier, YOUNGER looks don't make your husband proud to "show you off". Costs little. New introductory size now only 50c.

Bramuglia Resigns As Peron Minister

Buenos Aires, Aug. 11 (AP).—Dr. Juan A. Bramuglia, has resigned as Argentine Foreign Minister, a post he has held since 1946, Foreign Office sources disclosed tonight.

The informants said Bramuglia, who at times has been at ods with the administration over internal policies, presented his resignation yesterday to President Juan D. Peron has not accepted it.

The informants said Bramuglia had resigned after differences with Jeronimo Remorino, Argentine Ambassador to Washington, who was recalled for conferences with the Foreign Office. Remorino arrived by plane from Washington Tuesday. Before leaving the U. S. Capital the Ambassador had said he had no idea why he had received the unexpected summons.

Unconfirmed rumors said other members of the cabinet also had resigned. Neither Bramuglia nor other cabinet members could be reached for comment.

Pascual La Rosa, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, expressed surprise at the report.

"If it is true Senor Bramuglia has resigned," he commented, "it seems I would be one of the first to know."

Bramuglia was a member of the original cabinet named by Peron when he took office in 1946. He is regarded as one of the most moderate members and a friend of the United States.

Joint Statement

Aid Pledged Philippines By Truman

President Truman yesterday promised this country will "render all feasible assistance" to strengthen the new Philippine Republic.

But a joint statement by Mr. Truman and Philippine President Elpidio Quirino made no mention of Quirino's proposal for a Pacific Union. It said only:

"The United States will continue to watch sympathetically the efforts of the peoples of Asia to force stronger ties of economic cooperation and collaboration, to hasten the progress of self-government and to preserve their freedom."

On behalf of the two executives the statement said: "It is recognized that the capacity of the Philippine Republic to live up to the high hopes which events of the past three years have kindled must depend in part upon its economic situation."

The Presidents agreed that resistance to "those forces which seek . . . enslavement" of free peoples will be most effective where economic conditions are good.

400,000 Welcome Quirino to New York

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—President Elpidio Quirno of the Philippines received New York's traditional tribute today—a parade to City Hall through a shower of ticker tape.

Some 400,000 persons lined sidewalks of the financial district to watch the 25-car motorcade that brought President Quirino from La Guardia Field.

At City Hall Mayor William O'Dwyer presented Quirino with a scroll, citing him for distinguished and exceptional public service. He hailed Quirino as a "teacher, lawyer and patriot" and the Philippine Republic as 'the strong point of democracy in the Pacific, from which democracy can flow to all of Asia."

President Quirino told the 400 guests at City Hall that he was in the midst of an election campaign and his opponents were very busy while he was away.

O'Dwyer, a candidate for reelection in November, laughed heartily.

Bradley Heads Joint Chiefs

Staff of the Army February 7, 1948, upon the retirement of General Eisenhower.

Denfeld, who is 58, was named Chief of Naval Operations December 15, 1947, succeeding Adm. Chester W. Nimitz. The Navy chief serves in a two-year appointment, rather than the four years specified for the Army and Air Force Chiefs of Staff.

Near East Arms Ban Is Abolished

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—The United Nations Security Council voted today to end the Near East arms embargo and abolish the post of Palestine mediator held by Dr. Ralph J. Bunche.

By a vote of 9 to 0, with Russia and the Ukraine abstaining, the Council in substance decided:

1. That the armistice pacts negotiated by Bunche had outdated the 14-month-old truce order and its ban on import of arms and troops to Israel or the Arab states.

2. That remaining negotiations for a final Holy Land settlement could be left to the Palestine Conciliation Commission, now working with Arab and Israel envoys at Lausanne, Switzerland.

The Council, meanwhile, reaffirmed its decree that the opponents in last year's Palestine war maintain an unconditional ceasefire.

Cancellation of the embargoes meant arms traffic to the Near East was now limited only by the moral pledge of the United States and Britain that they would ship no more munitions than Israel or the Arab states needed for their own defense and security.

Israel had sought unsuccessfully to have the Council continue the strict arms embargo, arguing that cancellation would produce an arms race that might precipitate a "second round" in the Arab-Israeli war.

The Council unanimously approved a resolution paying tribute to Bunche and the late Count Bernadotte for their work in halting the Palestine warfare.

Nationalists Withdrawing To Southwest

Canton, Aug. 11 (AP).—A southwestward withdrawal of the Nationalists' South China defense headquarters was reported today by Ta Kung Pao, Canton's leading paper.

While an army spokesman declined comment, this plausible report lent credence to a general conviction that Gen. Pai Chung-hsi would pull back into his native Kwangsi Province rather than due south to defend the approaches of this provisional capital against the Communists.

The paper said Pai had moved his headquarters to Kyang, 50 miles southwest of Hengyan, which is 265 miles north of Canton. It said his rear echelon was established another 75 miles southwest at Chuanhsien, which is inside Kwangsi.

The army's Canton spokesman denied Canton was being abandoned by the government, but this could well be possible in the event of Pai's retreat into Kwangsi.

Gen. Teng Wen-yi, the army spokesman, said anti-Communist uprisings behind the Red lines in the central China provinces of Honan, Hupeh and Anhwei now involved up to 240,000 men armed with 100,000 rifles.

Senate Unit Approves Copper Imports Duty

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday approved a proposal to reinstate the tariff duty of two cents a pound on copper imports.

BOY SUES TO ANNUL PARENTS' DIVORCE—Mom and pop made a mistake in Reno in 1945, claims 5-year-old Ronald Henry Farah of New York City. The boy, embraced by his mother, Mrs. Frances Farah, filed suit yesterday in New York State Supreme Court to annul his parents' divorce, an action which the mother could not take because she was a party to the divorce. The petition claims the father, Henry Farah, misrepresented his financial position in an agreement which provided $55 weekly to support mother and son. The boy's suit asks 50,000 damages and declares that after the support agreement was made it was learned that Farah had an annual income of $25,000

4 Ships to Quit Coastal Port

Hongkong, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—The Chinese Nationalist navy sank one Communist ship and ordered four foreign vessels, including the United States Lines' Iran Victory, out of Taku Bay Tuesday in an effort to enforce its blockade of the North China coast.

The Central News Agency, which reported the action, said at the same time 12 Chinese steamers were detained. The ships were all off Taku, the coastal port for Communist-held Tientsin.

The other three foreign ships were Panamanian, including the Atlantic Trader.

Maragon Firm Paid for Freezer, Probe Told

Vaughan and the freezer, Maragon said: "I didn't know anything about it."

Manufacturer Gross had been telling about his experiences with Hunt, including the one about Hunt saying he wanted to invite him to breakfast at the White House, when Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), shot a question at him.

"Did you ship deep-freezes to Washington?"

"Should I answer that?" Gross said, looking up.

"You certainly should," said McCarthy.

He answered he had sent the freezers to Washington.

"To whom?" he was asked.

"Well, to Harry Vaughan . . ."

William P. Rogers, committee counsel, spoke up and said: "Hold it."

He and the Senators went into a huddle. An agreement was reached, it was explained afterward, that disclosure of other names would be held up pending an inquiry to determine who paid for the freezers. Counsel Rogers said it was not an attempt to "cover up."

General Vaughan's name already had tumbled onto the record, so the questioning went on from there.

"Who sent you a check for the deep-freeze you delivered to General Vaughan?" Senator Mundt asked.

"The Albert Verley Co. of Chicago," Gross answered.

Senator McCarthy developed that John Maragon worked for the Verley Co. and had traveled to Europe for it. He pointed out, too, that Harry Hoffman, a Milwaukee advertising man, also worked for perfume outfit.

Gross had testified it was Hoffman who led him to Management Counselor Hunt.

Paid for Others, Too

"Were the others (deep-freeze units) paid for by the same company?" Gross was asked.

"That's right," he said, "either by Bennett or the Albert Verley Co."

David A. Bennett was identified as the head of the Verley Co. Maragon, in a news conference the other day, said it was Bennett who hired him in 1945 at a salary "four times" greater than the $2700 a year he had been receiving from the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), chairman of the subcommittee, adjourned the hearing at 3:30 p. m. until this morning at 10.

Many reporters who had been covering the hearing hurried to the White House for Mr. Truman's 4 o'clock news conference. It was certain there would be questions about General Vaughan.

The first one was in reference to testimony of Housing Expediter Tighe Woods that General Vaughan called on him and asked him to "please hurry up" action on a construction permit for Tanforan, a California race track.

Race Track Brought Up

"Mr. President," a reporter asked, "do you think it was within the realm of propriety for your military aide and veterans' affairs coordinator to assist a race track to get a permit for scarce building materials when there was a serious shortage of these materials for veterans' housing?"

Mr. Truman said he had no comment. He said he didn't know whether the reporter's statement was a fact or not, and he added that the reporter didn't know either.

"That was the testimony of your Housing Expediter under oath," said the reporter, Carl Levin, of the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Truman repeated he had no comment to make.

"Is there any significance in the fact that General Vaughan isn't here today?" another reporter asked. "We can't see him in the back row."

The President said he imagined Vaughan had some appointments in his office. Then, laughing, he told the reporters not to think Vaughan was afraid of them.

"Mr. President," he was asked, "are you attempting to make any personal determination of the facts regarding General Vaughan?"

He said he was not—that it was not his business. He said he was not holding the investigation. He added that when he was in the Senate he got the facts for himself—an allusion to the famous Truman Committee.

"Mr. President," said another questioner, "if the Secretary of the Army feels that General Vaughan has committed indiscretions, would he be free to relieve him from active duty as he has done Generals Feldman and Waitt?

He will not, Mr. Truman answered with emphasis.

Another question was: "Mr. President, has anything in the current Hill investigation so far changed your attitude toward General Vaughan?"

Not in the slightest, Mr. Truman replied.

Asked whether he had talked to Senator Hoey about the possibility of General Vaughan's testifying, the Chief Executive said he had not. He explained he didn't want in any way to influence the North Carolinian's judgment, but wanted him to find out the facts and decide.

A reporter remarked that a deep-freeze unit might go well in the President's office, where the temperature was 84, and a moment later the questioning turned to the "White Paper" on China.

When the testimony of Albert Gross was interrupted yesterday, as he was about to disclose the names of others who got his freezers, Committee Counsel Rogers said "nothing will be lost by waiting until tomorrow."

May Testify Again Today

It was assumed, therefore, that Gross will be called back this morning when the hearing is resumed in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building.

Gross, now head of Tractor Specialties, Inc., told how he came to look up Hunt in 1946. He said he was manufacturing deep-freeze units for the home at that time, but was "practically out of business" because he couldn't get sheet steel.

He said that Hoffman, the Milwaukee advertising man, suggested he get in touch with Hunt, then a $50-a-day special consultant with the War Assets Administration.

Gross said that when he met Hunt here in Washington, Hunt succeeded in selling him "a bill of goods." He said Hunt told him he could get him the steel and then mentioned prominent persons he knew—General Vaughan, Robert E. Hannegan, then Postmaster General, and Gen. Edmund Gregory, then head of the WAA.

He said that on one occasion Hunt found him at his hotel eating breakfast. He said Hunt expressed disappointment, and remarked:

"I wanted to take you to the White House for breakfast."

He said Hunt later suggested he might "throw a party for Senators."

Gross testified he entered into a contract to pay Hunt $1000 a month from June 1, 1946, to December 31, 1948, and in addition, to pay him 10 per cent of purchases of the badly needed steel.

"Lost Confidence"

Gross said he paid Hunt $2000 in all, but in time "lost confidence" in him and broke the contract.

Roger White, counsel for Hunt, submitted a question which Committee Counsel Rogers asked Gross.

In reply to the question, Gross denied that, after seeing Hunt's name in Milwaukee headlines, he called Hunt's office here and said the management counselor would call him if he knew what was good for him.

A girl in the audience cried, "Oh!" when Gross made his denial. She identified herself as Mildred Ortmeyer, Hunt's secretary.

Gross said he actually called to demand that Hunt return his $2000.

The Senators were much interested in the fact that Hunt entered into his agreement with Gross at a time when he still was special consultant with the WAA, under General Gregory.

Attorney White submitted letters to show Hunt had arranged with WAA to be exempted from certain laws and to have the right to deal with private clients while he was with the Government agency.

Senator McCarthy said General Gregory ought to be called and asked if he helped Hunt to "figure out a way to get around" the law.

Former WAA Man Testifies

The first witness yesterday was Clarence W. Oehler of St. Louis, a former WAA employe in Chicago, who admitted he had fed Hunt a lot of misinformation in an effort to land a job with him.

It turned out that Oehler was the man who, on orders from Hunt, arranged for the production of match covers stamped "Swiped from Harry S. Truman." The matches were turned out by a St. Louis firm and some were sent to the White House.

Introduced as evidence was a letter from General Vaughan to Hunt, which said:

"Jim Hunt—

"Could I get some matches made for my friend Bill Pawley, Ambassador to Brazil?

Thanks.
Harry."

The last two witnesses were Lieut Col. H. Schaller of the Air Force, and George L. Livingstone of Brooklyn, N. Y., who testified about the activities of Joseph E. Rivere.

They told how Rivere offered manufacturers Air Force contracts running into big figures—contracts which turned out to be fictitious.

The Department of Justice, it was disclosed, is looking into the activities of Rivere, whose address was given as Lynbrook, Long Island.

Committee Counsel Rogers said the case was brought into the hearing merely to show that there was a type of influence peddler who produced contracts that were complete forgeries.

'2 Down, Vaughan to Go In Maragon Race'

By the United Press

It happened—honest—at President Truman's news conference yesterday.

While discussing the suspension of two Army generals in connection with the Senate's "5 per center" inquiry, a reporter quoted an editorial which said:

"Two down and Vaughan to go."

The President said it sounded like something a displaced person would say.

"Yeah, in a Maragon race," a reporter in the back of the room murmured.

'Big Business' Study Aim of Celler Committee

By The Associated Press

Chairman Celler (D., N. Y.) announced yesterday that a House Judiciary Committee studying monopoly power will make special studies of "business bigness" and interlocking directorates of insurance companies with other firms.

Celler told a news conference the committee wants to find out "all the facts' 'about big business. A special committee of Government experts is now making a preliminary study, he said.

There is some question, he said, "whether the huge corporations controlling billions of dollars should not be looked upon as a public utility" and regulated as such.

No Nation Can Stop B-36, Generals Say

I'd expect to get back all 100, barring engine trouble," he declared.

The Pacific air war veteran said he had been "astonished" at the way the faults of the B-36 had been cured. It was "one of those lucky freaks," he added.

Keenan asked Kenney whether any "pressure, threats, promises, or influence" had made him change his mind?

"Nothing could sell me a bomber except the bomber itself," snapped Kenney.

LeMay and Kenney disagreed on the worth of the B-36 as a daytime bomber.

Representative James Van Zandt (R., Pa.), whose charges against the B-36 procurement program resulted in the investigation, questioned both officers about the ability of the latest United States Navy, British and Russian fighters to shoot down the big bomber.

"I'd send it over at night and no fighter could intercept it at 40,000 feet," said Kenney. "In the day-time they'd probably get it, but the B-36 is a night bomber."

He told the committeemen he is "not worried" about Russian aeronautical developments outdistancing us."

LeMay Favors Daylight Use

LeMay said he would employ the B-36 in daylight under certain circumstances, even though it meant losses.

"Running a combat air force is like running a business," he said. "When you buy something, you've got to pay for it."

Under questioning by Keenan, LeMay said he'd assume responsibility as the "chief advocate" of cutting back other plane procurement last winter to buy 75 more of the six-engined B-36s.

"If called on to fight, I'll order out the B-36 crews and be in the first plane myself," he added.

The black-browed commander of the B-29 assaults on Japan told the probers that he had urged the Air Force's four-man Board of Senior Officers last winter to expand the Strategic Air Command's quota of B-36's from 36 to 150 and that the plan had been approved.

Keenan put a series of questions to him as to whether any "influence" had been brought to bear by Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington, Consolidated-Vultee Chairman Floyd Odlum or others to back the B-36. LeMay answered with flat "no's."

The charges of "irregularities" in B-36 procurement made by Van Zandt mentioned Symington and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson. The Pennsylvania Congressman linked the Pentagon decision to buy more Convair planes with alleged heavy contributions made by Odlum to the Democratic war chest last fall.

Maj. Gen. Frederic H. Smith, who had presented the Air Force's "History of B-36 Procurement" during preceding days, was questioned about its preparation. He declared that all pertinent matter had been included and nothing "unfavorable" omitted.

Only two sections of the report dealing with approval of the B-36 actions by the Department of Defense had been submitted to that office for review, Smith said. None of the rest of it had been "monitored" or "screened" in any way.

Members of the committee have said they will ask all witnesses these questions, because of an earlier order which came to light directing that material to be submitted to the committee be submitted to Deputy Secretary of Defense Stephen Early for "coordination."

Patterson Testifies

During the morning session, former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson testified on his part in the original wartime orders of the B-36. He said he took "full responsibility" for giving Consolidated a 100-plane production order in 1943 although the experimental versions had not yet been completed for test.

Patterson said he gave Tom Girdler, then Consolidated head, the order because he promised to cut 10 months off production time and have the bombers ready before the end of the war.

Keenan asked him whether his decision was "motivated in any way" by the ownership of the company.

"Not in the slightest," Patterson replied. "I didn't have the faintest notion who had the financial interest in Consolidate. I hadn't met Girdler until that day."

Kenney, now head of the Air-University, Montgomery, Ala., said that when he became strategic air commander in late 1946 he became "alarmed" over the "teething troubles" of the B-36.

"I was an operator," he declared, "And I wanted something that would operate. I wasn't interested in a lot of pretty pictures."

But when the defects were cured, Kenney added, he changed his mind.

Chairman Vinson said that other Air Force leaders will be heard today and then next week a subcommittee will visit the West Coast to take testimony from Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, retired, and visit aircraft plants.

75-Cent Wage Floor Is Voted

for workers engaged in production for interstate commerce. It would apply the Wage-Hour Act only to those considered "indispensable" for such production. The law now covers those "necessary" to this production.

The House-passed version also exempts employes of local retail and service establishments.

A local retail establishment is defined as one doing half of its business within the State where it is situated, provided three-fourths of its sales are not for resale but are recognized as retail in its business or industry.

Also exempted in the bill are seamen, fishermen, farm workers, employes of daily, weekly and semiweekly newspapers of less than 5000 circulation, suburban streetcar and bus operators, taxicab drivers, employes of telephone companies with fewer than 500 subscribers, and employes of so-called "peckerwood" sawmills hiring fewer than 12 workers.

The measure contains a ban on child labor and states that employers violating its provisions would be subject to a maximum penalty of $10,000 fine and six months' imprisonment.

Voting against the bill were 23 Democrats: Representatives Abernethy (Miss.), Andrews (Ala.), Bennett (Fla.), Chelf (Ky.), Combs (Tex.), Cox (Ga.), Doughton (N. C.), Gathings (Ark.), Grant (Ala.), Hays (Ark.), Hobbs (Ala.), McMillan (S. C.), Murray (Tenn.), Pickett (Tex.), Rankin (Miss.), Sims (S. C.), Trimble (Ark.), Whitten (Miss.), Whittington (Miss.), Willis (La.), Wilson (Tex.), Winstead (Miss.), Wood (Ga.).

And 12 Republicans: Bramblett (Calif.), Cole (Kans.), Curtis (Nebr.), Gwinn (N. Y.), Hoffman (Mich.), Kilburn (N. Y.), Miller (Md.), Miller (Nebr.), Rich (Pa.), Sanborn (Idaho), Smith (Kans.), and Taber (N. Y.).

Capitol Today to Get Brigham Young Statue

Utah will place a statue of Grigham Young, Mormon founder of the State, in Statuary Hall in the Capitol today. Made of white Carrara marble, the seven-foot high seated figure was carved in Rome by Young's grandson, Mahonri Young of New York and Ridgefield, Conn.

The sculptor has done several monuments in Utah, including the Sea Gull monument in Salt Lake City and another commemorating the city's founding.

Truman Blames GOP Filibuster for Log Jam Of Money Bills in Congress, Budget Delays

President Truman, who last year called the Eightieth Congress the "second worst" in history, yesterday paid his respects to this present session.

He declared that Senator Hayden (D., Ariz.) had told him this week that he had never seen appropriation bills in such a tangle.

The jam is due, the President quickly added, to the Republican filibuster. Hayden, he said, had been in the Senate a long time. (The Senator was first elected in 1926).

The President added that the delay had forced postponement of the preparation of the summer budget. He also said that the military budget for next year has not been made up, nor has any figure been settled upon for it.

The President laughed when a reporter made reference to the birthday speech by former President Hoover Wednesday night. The reporter asked if he believed that the country was "on the last mile toward collectivism." Mr. Truman said he thought that was funny, but that he didn't know what it meant.

He also flatly disputed an assertion by the United States Steel official that his appointment of a fact-finding board in the steel labor row meant the end of collective bargaining.

Mr. Truman said that such boards have been in operation for at least 15 years.

Senate Unit Ends Hearings On Tom Clark

By the United Press

The Senate Judicary Committee yesterday ended hearings on Attorney General Tom C. Clark's nomination to the Supreme Court. Then held a one-hour closed session but took no action.

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) called another closed meeting for today to consider the appointment, but refused to say whether a vote would be taken. The committee and Senate are expected to confirm the nomination.

Asked if there was opposition to the nomination among committee members, he replied: "I wouldn't say there was any opposition evinced here."

He said there was some talk about calling Clark before the committee. A Supreme Court nominee has not been called before the committee since Justice Felix Frankfurter was summoned 11 years ago.

Before closing the hearings, McCarran read a telegram from former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson indorsing Clark's appointment. Patterson, a Republican, said his views were based on years of close association with Clark and "on a most favorable judgment as to his character integrity and ability as a lawyer." He was certain Clark would add distinction and luster to the court."

James J. Laughlin, attorney for Mildred E. (Axis Sally) Gillars, who was convicted of treason earlier this year, added another lawyer's indorsement to that of Patterson. Laughlin said that Clark "certainly has a regard for law and order," and that most of the opposition to his nomination came from "Communist sources."

Among the groups opposing the nomination were the left-wing CIO Fur and Leather Workers Union, which accused Clark of antilabor bias.

Ellis O. Jones, one of the defendants in the 1944 mass sedition trial blamed Clark for waiting two years before deciding to drop any effort to revive the trial, which Jones called "one of the foulest blots" on the Nation's history.

Raft's Luggage Searched in Hunt For Khan's Gems

Paris, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Luggage of movie gangster George Raft was searched for 20 minutes at Le Bourget Field today by security police who were looking for the $785,000 Aga Khan jewels.

Police apologized profusely to Raft and said they had orders to search the baggage of every incoming passenger. The search may be extended to include all transatlantic passengers leaving French ports, officials said.

Raft, who had just flown in from a French coastal resort, told police, "Sure, I understand." He stood back with a big grin while customs agents scrutinized his custom-made silk shirts, shorts and ties.

Customers Corner

Have you ever noticed the date stamped on each carton of A&P eggs? It is put there to protect the quality and freshness of this perishable item.

An egg that is Grade A when it is inspected and packed could become Grade B or C by the time you buy it if it has been improperly or slowly handled.

We don't want that ever to happen to an A&P egg. That is why we put the date when the eggs were graded on each carton. Eggs not sold within a few days of that date are removed from sale even though they are still of good quality.

If you should ever find that any of our egg cartons bear old dates or that any eggs fail to live up to our high quality standards, please tell us about it. Please write:

Reds Slip Into U. S., McCarran Claims

By the United Press

Chairman Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) of the Senate Judiciary Committee charged yesterday that about 225 persons, including many Communist agents, have slipped into the United States since 1947 aboard the Polish ships Batory and Sobieski.

The Batory is the ship on which Communist leader Gerhart Eisler escaped from this country several weeks ago. Both it and the Sobieski are operated by the Gdynia-American Line, owned by the Polish government, and plying regularly between New York and Europe.

McCarran said the situation was brought to light in secret hearings of his committee during the past week. The witnesses, he added, included members of the crews of the two vessels.

McCarran, who is considering legislation to clamp down on entry of subversive aliens, said the illegal entrants who arrived aboard the two ships posed as crew members, and simply stayed in this country when the vessels departed for Europe again.

"Approximately 225 persons who arrived since 1947 have failed to depart with the ships," he added.

Included, he said, were a number of persons "identified as Communist party members and at least one official of the party." He did not say how many alleged party members were included.

But he asserted that testimony before the committee made it "clear that the persons brought in have engaged in subversive activities."

Season Heat Record Set

staying above that mark until after 6 p. m.

Relative humidity was 75 per cent at 5:18 a. m. and 35 per cent at 4 p. m.

The heat victims reported by police and hospitals were:

Cleo Carson, 38, a laborer, 632 Acker st. ne., taken to Providence Hospital from a job at 13th st. and New York ave. nw.

Ora Lee Ford, 23, of 329 Virginia ave. se., treated at Providence Hospital and released.

Carroll Hardman, 53, of 2620 K st. nw., taken to Casualty Hospital from Sterling ave. and Harewood rd. se.

Gunter Hasker, 35, of 1617 5th st. sw., a streetcleaner, taken to George Washington University Hospital after he collapsed nearby.

Otto Franklin, 57, an engineer, 917 C st. ne., admitted to Garfield Hospital.

John Gibbons, 64, of 1309 17th st. nw., a switchboard operator in the garage at the Interior Building, treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

Ethel Brice, 45, of 2818 8th st. nw., a laundress at the Tolman Laundry, 5248 Wisconsin ave. nw., treated at Emergency Hospital and released.

Though the Government weather forecasters were confident that the Canada air mass will move here enough to set up a "front" with the existing warm air mass and cause showers, they were not fully certain that the end of the present five-day heat wave is in sight.

If the cool air mass performs as they expect, they said, Washington will have some relief for two to three days. However, they would not make bets on the outcome, because, they said, some similar cool air masses suddenly disintegrate and do not continue on their expected path.

The warm air blanket still oppresses a large section of the country from the middle Great Plains eastward. New England and northern New York got relief yesterday from the cool air mass.

And at a place called Descanso, Calif., in eastern San Diego County, the mercury dropped early yesterday to a frigid 28 degrees. It was colder than Leadville, Colo., 10,000 feet up in the Rocky Mountains, where 38 above zero was recorded.

Cat With 6 Kittens Adopts 6 Cottontails

Clearwater, Neb., Aug. 11 (AP).—A cat with a new brood of six kittens augmented her family with six baby cottontail rabbits the same day.

W. H. De Camp said he found the rabbits in an orchard and presented them to the cat as food, but she transferred them to the box with kittens and began caring for them, too.

Drivers to Seek Pay Hike From Own Bus Firm

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 11 (AP).—Union drivers for an employee-owned bus company are going to ask themselves for more pay.

Negotiations for a new contract between Local 1283, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL), and the United Transportation Co. start next Wednesday.

Last March, seven drivers bought the bus company. They became its owners and directors. One of them was George D. Sherman, who became a vice president and director.

Sherman later resigned the company office—he is still a stockholder—so he could continue as president of the union and lead it in negotiations.

Retail Food Profits Cut by Heat Wave

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—The heat wave has cut retail food profits to a postwar low, Herman B. Glaser, attorney for the Retail Merchants Association, said today.

"The only retail food establishments doing normal business are air-conditioned restaurants," he said.

Probe Committee Hears Story of Red Infiltration in Labor Unions

A story of Communist aims to dominate American labor unions by "infiltration" was told to a House Un-American Activities subcommittee yesterday by a man who identified himself as a former Communist leader.

John Zack Kornfeder, the witness, testified that the CIO Electrical Workers Union—now with about 600,000 members—originally was set up by Communists.

Moreover, he identified two men now connected with the union as Communists or former party members. They were James Matles, international organizer, and James Lustig, identified as a union representative in the New York district.

Representative Walter (D., Pa.), a committee member, asked Kornfeder to explain how Communists get control of labor unions.

"By infiltration," Kornfeder responded. "They set up secret groups in unions, and in that way elect officers and get control.

Education Bill Still Stalled In Committee

Despite various compromise suggestions, federal aid to education yesterday remained stalled within the House Education and Labor Committee.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr. (D., N. Y.) announced that a 13-member majority had agreed on a new compromise bill worked out by Representative Thomas H. Burke (D., Ohio) and is ready to force action.

Other members said, however, that the announcement was incorrect.

First hurdle against action, these members pointed out, is the fact that Chairman John Lesinski (D., (Mich.) will not call a meeting of the committee.

Thirteen members could call a meeting by signing a petition but so far the requisite number has not been found.

Neither Powell nor Burke has yet signed a petition for a meeting, Representative Hugo Sims, jr. (D., S. C.) said yesterday.

Sims has contended that if a meeting were called 13 members would be found to agree either upon the Senate-passed Federal aid bill or a GOP-bill providing for aid only to needy States.

Despite President Truman's support of Federal aid to education, House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) is opposed to it. So also is House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.).

City Would Get Parks, Pools In House Bill

House District Committee Chairman McMillan D., S. C.) yesterday introduced a bill to transfer control to the District Commissioners of all local swimming pools, playgrounds and parks now controlled by the Interior Department.

He said he would call the committee into session, today if possible, early next week for sure, to consider the bill.

"I believe we can get it through the House this session," he said.

McMillan's bill would require the Commissioners to make the rules for the play facilities, including rules on segregated or non-segregated use, nub of the whole lengthy controversy here between Interior and the District Recreation Board.

The District Committee head said he had talked to half a dozen committee members yesterday and all agreed "something should be done to settle this thing once and for all."

Meanwhile, the Interior Department yesterday drained the Anacostia pool, closed since June 29, because boys had been climbing over the fences and taking a swim. The pool was refilled in hopes of a settlement of the pool controversy but life guards have not been on duty.

House Group Acts to Raise Aid to Needy

By the United Press

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday approved a revised public assistance program calling for additional Federal contributions to the needy of about 160 million dollars a year.

The money would go to States that at present make the smallest payments under the Social Security plan of helping the needy aged, the blind and dependent children. Most of these States are in the South.

The committee approved the program as one of its final steps in drafting legislation for a thorough overhauling of the Social Security Act. It is expected to approve the revision measure formally toda yor early next week.

Formula Given

Under the new formula agreed on yesterday, the Federal Government would share in assistance payments to the needy over 65, needy blind, and needy permanently and totally disabled as follows:

Four-fifth of the first $25; plus half the next $10; plus a third of the next $15; with a maximum from Federal and State funds of $50 a month on individual assistance payments.

Under present law the formula for assistance to the aged and blind is three-fourths of the first $20 and half the next $30, up to a maximum payment of $50. The Federal Government does not now contribute to the needy disabled as it would under the proposed new program.

$27 Maximum for Children

In the case of dependent children, the committee proposed that the Government contribute four-fifths of the first $15 per recipient; plus half the next $6; plus a third of the next $6, with the maximum individual payment $27 for the first child and $18 for each additional child.

Under present law, the Federal Government contributes three-fourths of the first $12 plus half the balance up to a maximum $27 for the first child and $18 for each additional child.

Boy, 3, Fractures Skull

Three-year-old Nelson Stickley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stickley of Dunn Loring, Va., suffered a fractured skull yesterday, after a fall down the back steps of his home, onto a concrete runway. The youngster, whose father is a Falls Church lawyer, is in satisfactory condition at Arlington Hospital.

Maryland Hangs James, Child Killer

Baltimore (Friday), Aug. 12 (AP).—Child killer Eugene H. James, 32, was dropped through the gallows of the Maryland Penitentiary shortly after midnight.

Also hanged in the small, white-washed execution chamber was John Thomas Knowles, 26, who stabbed his girl friend 25 times before shocked spectators in Druid Hill Park.

James was silent as he stepped through the small door leading from the condemned cells.

The mask and noose were adjusted quickly and the trap was sprung at 12:21 a. m. He choked to death when his feet doubled up and hit the rope. He was pronounced dead 15 minutes later.

The noose cracked Knowle's neck at 12:02 a. m. and he was pronounced dead at 12:16 a. m.

James pounced on 11-year-old Marsha Brill from behind a bush as she was bicycling with friends near Pimlico racetrack and stabbed her to death with a butcher knife. The slaying occurred in July, 1948.

James also was indicted for another murder, strikingly similar to that of little Marsha Brill.

Nine days before that crime, 11-year-old Carol Bardwell was slain while bicycling in Washington's Rock Creek Park. James was charged with that murder in Washington but never brought to trial there.

James confessed the Brill killing, and his attorneys later contended "psychological torture" by police had forced him to do so. He had led officers to the spot where the murder knife was buried.

Judge Herman M. Moser, in sentencing the odd-jobs man, declared he could not "imagine a more horrible, outrageous offense."

The James case also figured prominently in court battles over the Baltimore supreme bench's "Rule 904" restricting publication of local crime news.

Four Baltimore area radio stations and a news commentator were convicted of contempt of court under the rule. They had broadcast either that James had confessed or had a past criminal record.

The Court of Appeals reversed the convictions and threw out the main sections of the rule on grounds it violated constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press and freedom of speech.

Fatal Beating

Driver Held In Death of Wife's Dad

HERBERT F. WILKINS
One-armed suspect

MRS. HERBERT F. WILKINS
Still battered and bruised

A one-armed truck driver was held for action of the grand jury yesterday in the fatal beating of his 70-year-old father-in-law, a disabled veteran of the Spanish-American and First World wars.

A coroner's jury at the inquest heard the truck driver's wife, Mrs. Mary A. Wilkins, 23, testify that she saw her husband, Herbert Frank Wilkins, 34, strike her father, William Benezette, in the face several times when he objected because Wilkins was beating her.

Mrs. Wilkins, who appeared at the inquest with both eyes blacked, broke down after she told of the beating, and sobbed, "I can't forgive my husband for what he's done."

The altercation occurred the night of August 4 at 1028 4th st. ne., where Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins and their two children have occupied an apartment in the home of Mrs. Wilkins' parents. Benezette died Wednesday at Casualty Hospital of brain hemorrhage.

Mrs. Wilkins said that earlier that night her husband had brought home "a gentleman I had been keeping company with," and the three of them had had some beer in three different places. Wilkins had knocked down both her and the other man outside their home, she testified, and beat her again when she and her husband went inside.

Detective Sergt. Lawrence A. Hartnett testified Wilkins told him he had suspected his wife was going out with the man involved, identified as one Mac O'Donnell. He had brought O'Donnell home to "talk it over," according to the testimony.

Mobster, Cops Facing Trial

San Francisco, Aug 11 (U.P.).—Los Angeles mobster Mickey Cohen and two Los Angeles police officers were ordered today by the State Supreme Court to stand trial on charges of conspiring to beat and rob Alfred Pearson, a Southern California repair shop owner.

The court denied writs filed by Cohen and two of his dozen co-defendants, Lieut. Clarence B. Swan and Sergt. Winfield Wolfe of the Los Angeles police department.

They were indicted by the Los Angeles County grand jury after a group of Cohen's henchmen were alleged to have beaten up Pearson, who had attached a woman's home over a repair bill.

Man Who 'Boasts' He Shot Cohen Hunted

Los Angeles, Aug. 11 (AP).—The sheriff's office today reported it is seeking a San Francisco former convict for questioning about reports he shot Gambler Mickey Cohen and boasted he was going to "get" Gov. Earl Warren.

'On the Town' Is Cleaned Up the charge was dropped, and Matthews got his $25 back. King explained it this way:

"The entire play has been cleaned up. The use of the name of the Deity has been eliminated. Several other lines to which there were objections have been changed or eliminated. That's all we want.

"It would be a good idea if a board of censorship were created for the District. Then this office wouldn't have the responsibility of passing on what's right and what's wrong, what's moral and what's not, according to the ideas of all the people that can be in a theater audience. I wish they'd do it."

When Man Lacks $3000 Bond, What Good Is Freedom?

Ellis M. Heath, 35, of 439 Irving st. nw., won an empty victory in Municipal Court yesterday.

He was finally granted bond on a threats charge but then found it was so high ($3000) he had to stay in District jail because he couldn't raise it.

Heath was originally released under $800 bond on charges of threats and destroying private property and his case was continued to last Tuesday. In court that day, Judge Aubrey Fennell was informed that in the meantime Heath had been charged with assault.

Judge Fennell set October 6 for a jury trial on the assault charge and put bond at $500. The charges of destroying movable property and threats were continued to August 18. Judge Fennell continued bond at $500 on the former charge but revoked bond on the latter, and Heath was sent to the District jail.

Wednesday, Heath's lawyer, Alonzo Ware, filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Bond, usually is denied only on charges of murder, he said. District Court Judge Richmond B. Keech signed the petition and set yesterday for a hearing.

Before the hearing was held, however, all interested parties conferred with Judge Fennell, who agreed to set bond at $3000 on the threats charge.

W. Va. Boy, 13, Slays His Father for $60 to Buy Bicycle

Buckhannon, W. Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—A 13-year-old boy admitted to police today that he shot and killed his father with a .22-caliber rifle to get $60 to buy a bicycle.

State Police Corpl. R. C. Culp identified the boy as Jerry Riggs. The body of the boy's father, Harry L. Riggs, 48, was found yesterday lying in a cornfield near his home at Tallmansville with a bullet wound in the chest.

Culp quoted the boy as saying he shot his father because he spanked him too much and wouldn't give him the money for the bicycle. He told the officer he hid behind a stump in the cornfield and shot his father, who was standing 18 feet away.

He went back to the house, took $1315 from a hiding place where the father kept his money and hid all but $60 of it along the road near the house, the boy told Culp.

After buying a bicycle, Jerry said, he went to a young people's church session and showed the bicycle to the children there, including a brother and sister, Barbara, 11 and Frederick, 8.

He hurried home to watch over the youngest child, 6-year-old Herbie Mack. The mother has been dead for about four years.

Jerry is held for murder.

Man, Phone Linked To Medium Death

Vision Is His To Have and Hold

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

JOUETT T. DAILEY, 3D, has everything to see. The son of T/Sergt. and Mrs. Jouett T. Dailey of Clinton Air Force Base, Wilmington, Ohio, was born blind 17 months ago. He sees for the first time as a result of a rare operation which provided new eye pupils

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—A new twist entered Baltimore's eerie case of the murdered medium today with a report that a man answered the telephone in Mrs. Emma A. Kefalos' apartment the day she was strangled.

Mrs. Kefalos, who gave spiritual readings and gazed into crystal balls in her raspberry-tinted apartment, was found tied hand and foot with an ironing cord wrapped tightly about her neck Monday.

Since then, police have been running down clues of the material and out-of-this world variety.

At present, detectives are concentrating on the reported mysterious telephone answerer.

A Negro handyman who occasionally worked for the spiritualist telephoned her apartment about 1 p. m. Monday.

Instead of Mrs. Kefalos, a man answered the telephone, the handyman said. Police believe he may have talked to the strangler.

A search also is on for a well-dressed man and woman who went to the medium's apartment that morning.

Police are also looking for a Washington spiritualist who used to visit the 60-year-old Baltimore medium once or twice a week. They want to question her about Mrs. Kefalos' private life and friends.

Mailmen Get Their Day

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 11 (U.P.).—A bill designed to protect mailmen from dogs was signed into law today by Gov. Adlai Stevenson. Its opponents contended "every dog is entitled to the first bite free." The new law makes dog owners liable for damages.

Officials Discuss Express Highway

How to speed construction of the Washington-Baltimore express highway, planned for several years, will be discussed at a meeting here today by Federal District and Maryland officals.

The meeting, arranged by the highways and bridges committee of the American Automobile Association's District advisory board, is a result of last week's accident at Laurel, Md. which killed two persons and injured 20 bus passengers.

Washington I. Cleveland, District AAA manager, said the present road to Baltimore is "wholly inadequate" to carry the traffic, which, he said, is the heaviest in America.

The meeting will be held at 12:30 p. m. at the Hotel Mayflower.

'Illegal Distilling' Increases 34 Pct.

By The Associated Press

The volume of illegal distilling went up 34.8 per cent during the year which ended June 30.

This has been reported by the Internal Revenue Bureau, which has noted an upward trend in general liquor law violations. The Bureau commented that the trend continues one begun in 1947 "following the abandonment of sugar rationing."

Distilling interest representatives have blamed high liquor taxes.

Bureau Commissioner George J. Schoeneman reported use of new techniques to combat the rise in illegal distillery operations. They include use of a Coast Guard airplane working in conjunction with radio-equipped ground agents.

The 34.8 per cent jump in volume of illicit distilling was based on an increase of 945,631 gallons in the amount of mash seized at illicit stills.

For the entire country, the report said, illegal still seizures during fiscal 1949 totaled 8008 against 6757 in fiscal 1948. Arrests totaled 8894 against 7640.

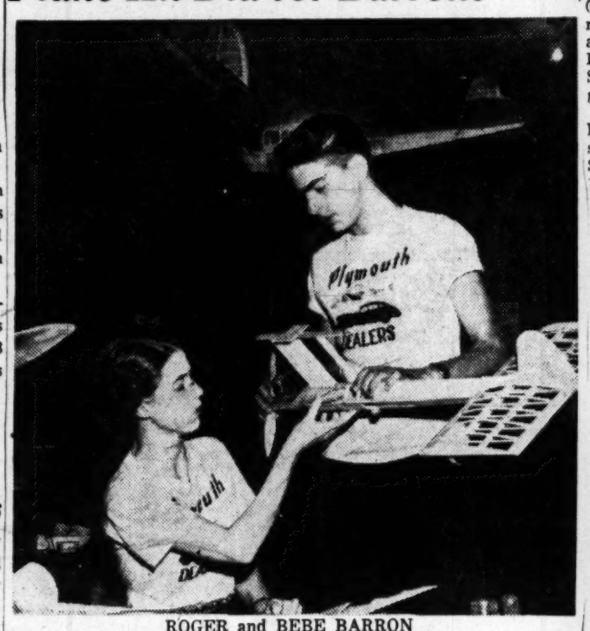
Czech Paper Asks Farmers to Spy On Rich Neighbors

Prague, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Army newspaper Obranu Lidu has urged farmers to spy and inform on their wealthier neighbors in order to prevent harvest "sabotage."

The newspaper called on peasants to keep a sharp eye on the "remnants of our internal reaction—the class enemy in the village, the rich farmers—and to call the security police as soon as these people are suspected of doing anything wrong."

A "big" farmer is considered one holding a maximum of 125 acres under the land reform program. The press assault on such landowners may be the forerunner to an often-predicted full-scale government drive for collectivization of farms.

It's Amazing What a Model Plane Kit Did for Barrons



ROGER and BEBE BARRON

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Eight years ago, when he was 6, Roger Barron received a model airplane kit for Christmas. To say that it has led to complications is an understatement.

If you journey out to the comfortable Barron home at Springfield, Va., 2 miles south of Annandale, you'll find that one entire wing of the house has been turned over to the construction of model aircraft.

While ducking the numerous planes hanging from the ceiling, you'll spot trophies, plaques and medals decorating the large room's walls—more than 40 of them captured at competitions up and down the East Coast and as far West as Kansas.

Sounds like Roger has been bitten by the model plane bug, and with no little success, doesn't it?

Meet Bebe

That's only one-third the story. Meet Bebe Barron, Roger's 16-year-old sister, and their father, Bryton Barron, the State Department's treaty division chief. They're equally avid hobbyists, and equally good at winning firsts.

In fact, Bebe is going along with her brother to the Third International Model Plane Contest at Detroit, all expenses paid, for competition from August 22 to 29. It will be Roger's third international contest; Bebe's second. Illness kept her away last year.

The Barron youngsters are two of seven winners (she's the only girl) in a recent competition held at Andrews Field. Their gas-powered model planes, and model aircraft built by the other five winners, came off best.

How long does it take to construct a plane like Roger's radio-controlled job?

Lot of Work

Into the building of 6 feet of wing span and the 5-foot fuselage went some 250 hours of work. But it'll stay up from 5 to 10 minutes, doing loop-the-loops, figure eights, and spot landings, at Roger's beck.

Roger, a licensed "ham," is also the youngest licensed operator of radio controlled model planes. His call sign is W4NQV.

Mrs. Barron, only member of the family who doesn't build planes, is the "ground crew" of the "Flying Barrons." Her function, says Bebe, "is to remind us to eat and to go to bed."

That doubtless includes her husband. When he comes home from the office, he doesn't wait for dinner before tearing into his hobby. He gets right to work, says Bebe.

The Barrons, father, son and daughter, build gliders, rubber band-propelled planes, and gas-driven craft. Roger alone constructs the radio-controlled ships.

And it all started eight years ago, when a model plane kit was a Christmas present.

Spain Says Belgian Traitor Was Expelled

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—The Spanish Embassy announced today that Belgium's arch-collaborator and traitor, Leon DeGrelle, was "expelled" from Spain and left the country August 23, 1946.

The announcement followed published reports here that DeGrelle still was being harbored by the Spaniards.

Lie Sees Tension Abroad Easing

Stockholm, Sweden, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—United Nations Secretary General Trygve Lie said yesterday that international tension had eased considerably, but that "something still might happen."

"The prospects for a future peaceful development are much brighter than in 1946," Lie said at a press conference.

"August always used to be a difficult month in world politics. But this time it seems less troublesome than usual."

Riots Laid to Reds

Tokyo, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Communists were responsible for recent riots and disturbances in Japan, which were only "skirmishes preceding a full-dress revolution by force," a government investigating committee reported today.

South Africa May Cut U. S. Movie Spending

Johannesburg, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—South Africa may cut spending of dollars for American movies by 50 per cent, informed sources said today.

These sources said the American industry, rather than lose half its present market, might continue to send the normal quota of films and invest 50 per cent of the take in South African enterprises.

Ringling Head Signs Up 2 'Super-Colossal' Acts

Cologne, Germany, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—John Ringling North, United States circus magnate, said today he had bagged two "super-colossal" acts on the first stop in his quest for European talent.

North went to the Apollo Circus to look over the acts as soon as he arrived here. He signed a Frenchman who dives off a high pole to a sloping board, and a Swede who puts two elephants through "unsurpassed" fancy paces.

Paper From Straw May Up Europe's Newsprint

Paris, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Experiments in Italy and Britain with pulp made of straw and of hardwoods may result in a sizable increase in western Europe's newsprint production, an Economic Cooperation Administration paper expert said today.

Joseph E. Atchisson said Italy expected to manufacture about 35,000 tons of paper pulp from straw this year.

Blend ½ Blue Plate Mayonnaise with ½ grated sharp American cheese. Season with Worcestershire Sauce if desired. Spread on diamonds of toast or crackers. Run under broiler, or place in hot oven, a few minutes until lightly browned.
Optional garnish: slice of stuffed olive or sprinkling of paprika. Serve hot.
"IN SEASON" FRUIT SALAD
Make the most of luscious fresh peaches
For 4 servings:
6 medium-size freestone peaches
2 bananas
¼ cup finely chopped peanuts or other nuts
¼ cup Blue Plate Mayonnaise
Crisp salad greens
Peel and slice peaches. Arrange on crisp salad greens, as shown in photograph above. Roll bananas in finely chopped nuts, and slice crosswise. Arrange banana slices between peach slices. Top each salad with 1 tablespoon Blue Plate Mayonnaise. (If peaches are prepared ahead of serving time, sprinkle with lemon juice to prevent discoloration).
CLUB SANDWICHES
Good and hearty, for hungry-boy appetites
For each sandwich:

10 From 2 States Favor Home Rule

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Ten of the 15 new House members from Ohio and Indiana favor home rule for the District of Columbia.

A survey by The Washington Post showed 2 of the 15 opposed and three noncommittal. Adding in those who were in the House and voted on the 1948 home-rule roll calls, the 34 Congressmen from the two States divide this way:

For—21.
Against—8.
Noncommittal—4.
Not available—1.

The Senate-approved Kefauver bill and other home-rule measures are now in the hands of a House District Subcommittee which meets again on Tuesday.

Majority Favor It

For: 137.
Against: 31.
Noncommittal: 21.
Not available: 1.

For the House members who were not in Congress last year, the totals for the six areas are:

For: 42.
Against: 5.
Noncommittal: 11.

The other areas checked were New England, the West Coast, Pennsylvania, the Mountain States and the Dakotas and Illinois and Michigan.

Here are the opinions of members of the Ohio and Indiana delegations, who did not serve in the Eighticth Congress:

Stephen M. Young (D., Ohio), a member of previous Congresses, but not the Eightieth:

"I'm inclined to be opposed to the Kefauver bill in its present form. I'm not convinced it gives real home rule to the District It could be made a lot better bill than it is and no doubt would be amended on the floor."

Earl T. Wagner (D., Ohio), a former city solicitor and board of education member:

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm in favor of District home rule. I think we in Congress ought not to be bothered with these local problems—the time we take up on them we could use for something else."

Edward Breen (D., Ohio), former mayor of Dayton:

"I haven't seen the bill as yet and I'd rather not make any comment at this time."

James G. Polk (D., Ohio), a member of previous Congresses but not the Eightieth:

"I don't know too much about it and I don't want to commit myself. I do feel there should be a referendum of the people on the question."

Secret Consistent

Thomas H. Burke (D., Ohio):

"I'm for it. I can see no reason why any locality in the United States should be deprived of self-government."

Robert T. Secrest (D., Ohio), a member of previous Congresses but not the Eightieth:

John McSweeney (D., Ohio), a member of previous Congresses but not the Eightieth:

"I think the people here ought to have the right to vote for President. But the other question needs a great deal of study and I'm making it through people who have a stake in the community. There are many fundamental questions involved."

Elections Favored

Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio), a former mayor of Flushing:

"I'm in favor of local suffrage, especially for the school board and municipal council here. The Federal Government should have some guarantee of its interest here, of course."

Thurman C. Crook (D., Ind.):

"I'm favorable to it. I can't see any need of not permitting men and women born under the Stars and Stripes to vote and have at least a little to say about their government. If we're to strengthen our democracy at home, we've got to encourage voting, not discourage it."

Edward H. Kruse, jr. (D., Ind.):

"I don't know all the angles on it but I'm favorably inclined to it from what I know of it. I can imagine how these people must feel down here."

Walsh for House Voice

John R. Walsh (D., Ind.):

"I'm for home rule in general. I see no reason why Washington shouldn't have some rule and elect its own officials. I also think Washington should have a voice on the House floor."

Mrs. Cecil M. Harden (R., Ind.):

"I really haven't given it a great deal of thought. In some ways I feel people should have some say in their government here but many things enter into the government of the Nation's capital that do not prevail in other cities."

James E. Noland (D., Ind.):

"I'm inclined to be favorable. Congress spends too much time on a lot of insignificent legislation that could better be handled by people a lot closer to the problem."

Winfield K. Denton (D., Ind.):

"I think I'm for it. I think they ought to govern themselves here. I'm not very interested in the District of Columbia—that's why I think you ought to have home rule."

Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.):

"I figure that by the time I get back home I'll be well qualified to run for city council. I'm tired of helping run the city of Washington. They ought to govern themselves on purely local matters here."

Two Ohio members who served in the Eightieth Congress split their two 1948 votes—one for home rule, one against.

Brown Has No Opinion

One of the two, Mrs. Frances P. Bolton (R.) is now in Europe and could not be reached. This is the current opinion of the other:

Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio):

"I haven't studied that bill enough to know what it is, good or bad."

Those members who voted last year when the Auchincloss home rule bill weathered two House roll calls before it was withdrawn from the floor divide this way, on the basis of their 1948 votes:

For home rule: McCulloch (R., Ohio), Jenkins (R., Ohio), Vorys (R., Ohio), Huber (R., Ohio), McGregor (R., Ohio), Kirwan (R., Ohio), Feighan (R., Ohio), Crosser (R., Ohio), Madden (D., Ind.), Halleck (R., Ind.) and Wilson (R., Ind.).

Against home rule: Elston (R., Ohio), Clevenger (R., Ohio), Smith R., Ohio), Brehm (R., Ohio), Weichel (R., Ohio) and Harvey (R., Ind.).

Tavern License Suspended 5 Days By ABC Board

The Alcoholic Beverages Control Board yesterday imposed a five-day suspension of the license of the Five Points Tavern, 1201 K st. ne., where two 17-year-olds were served beer on June 1, according to their testimony at a hearing on Tuesday.

The license will be suspended from 8 a. m. August 22 until 8 a. m. August 27.

Elmer R. Mangum jr., the proprietor, and Mrs. Francis K. Baldwin, a waitress, testified at the hearing that the juvenile girls were known there and had not been served any beer.

ICC Examiner Opposes Capital Transit Stock Sale to Floridians

ards to continued performance by the carriers of adequate transportation service to the public.

"In the opinion of the examiner, the public should not be exposed to such hazards when, under the most favorable view to applicants that could be taken of the transaction, no counterbalancing benefits to the public would result from the approval."

Wolfson, on long-distance telephone, told The Washington Post last night that he "cannot understand the reasoning of the examiner to make such a report."

"If we do not come in there and preserve a good management and give good service," he said, "then our investment is lost. It is to our interest, more than that of anyone else, that we give good management, and good service.

"The present management has built an outstanding reputation for service and we intend to preserve it.

"The North American Co., now holding the stock, has no more experience and background in operation than we do. Why, then, is there a question about us and not about that company? Furthermore, one agency of government has been trying for years to force a sale of the stock. Now, another branch of government says "No." It doesn't seem to make sense."

As reported previously, North American Co. had planned to sell its block of transit stock at $20 a share to a Florida group headed by L. E. Wolfson and including his three brothers, J. A. B. Broadwater, Doran S. Weinstein, Jack Surasky, E. B. Gerbert and A. J. Rosenthal.

The group had placed a $250,000 down payment and proposed to pay the remainder later, if the transaction were approved by the ICC and the Securities and Exchange Commission. The SEC held a one-day hearing, but is withholding its decision until the ICC rules on jurisdiction.

"Lou" Wolfson, leader of the nine Floridians who seek to buy Capital Transit control, is a graduate of the University of Georgia who has staged a meteoric financial rise since he started with a $5000 stake back in 1932. He has large financial interests in the shipbuilding, marine construction and motion-picture business.

He lives in Jacksonville, Fla., where he is head of a mill supply firm known as Wolfson Brothers. Today he is reputed to be the largest single stockholder in such firms as Eastern Ship Salvage, Universal Pipelines, Merrit-Chapman, Ceco Agency Corp., Dispensers, Inc., and Monogram Pictures.

At the ICC hearing, a certificate was presented by Wolfson's auditor attesting that his net worth is not less than two million dollars. In view of Wolfson's many stock holdings, other quarters place his net worth in excess of 10 million dollars.

Building Union Is Upheld In Picketing Subcontractors

By The Associated Press

A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner held yesterday that a labor organization did not violate the Taft-Hartley Act by picketing a building in which two subcontractors were employing nonunion help.

William E. Spencer, the trial examiner, rejected the argument of NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham that the picketing was an illegal secondary boycott aimed at compelling the contractor to stop doing business with the two subcontractors employing nonunion workers.

The ruling was another in a series of cases in which Denham's claims have been turned down by a trial examiner or by the board itself.

Denham is the prosecuting officer for the five-man NLRB.

The ruling in this case involved the Denver, Colo., Building and Construction Trade Council of the AFL. The charges of secondary boycott were filed by William G. Churches, the contractor, and two of the subcontractors, C. J. St. Peter and P. B. Imes, all of Denver.

The council had placed a picket at four dwellings Churches was building in Denver. Imes was doing the plastering and St. Peter the roofing.

2 Counties Asked To Conserve Water

An urgent appeal to nearby Maryland residents to conserve water in the face of a "critical" shortage was made yesterday by Dwight B. Galt, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

In the commission district, covering Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Galt said the average daily consumption for July was 22 million gallons.

The commission, however, has facilities for filtering and purifying only 20 million gallons daily, Galt said, and has been getting an auxiliary water supply from District reservoirs to bridge the gap.

Galt said that the maximum which the District government can afford to sell to the commission has been reached. He added that a water reserve to care for line breaks and fires must be maintained.

Galt urged area water users to abide by the restriction adopted this summer forbidding use of water for sprinkling lawns or washing cars. By next spring, Galt noted, the commission probably will have installed a new 10 million gallon-per-day filtration plant and enlarged its water storage capacity.

The chairman said the water shortage will not reach the danger point this summer if consumers cooperate in saving water.

$28,000 Won On Radio Nets $7000

A Greenbelt, Md., man, who won $28,000 in prizes on a radio hit-the-jackpot program in New York last April, will realize about $7000 out of it, it was estimated last night with most of the prizes now sold.

This will be shared seven ways with different families, all but one of whom are relatives of the winner, John J. Noone, 36-year-old Washington postal clerk of 4-G Southway, Greenbelt. Some $9000 worth of the prizes were auctioned off here this week for about $3000.

"We're very glad its over," said Mrs. Anne Brockway, 15 D. Ridge rd., Greenbelt, Noone's sister-in-law and one of the sharers. Noone has spent a good share of his time disposing of his prizes since he won them in April. Before that the seven families had devoted about a year to doping out how to win on the program.

Besides the estimated $7000 take, there was about $1000 in gym equipment which Noone donated to the Greenbelt Boys Club.

Taxicab Fleet Owner Wins Back Tax Suit

A Bethesda taxicab fleet yesterday was awarded $75 in back county license taxes in Rockville Police Court in a decision which may pave the way for similar suits by other taxicab operators.

John S. Bigelow, who runs the We Cab Co., sued Montgomery County for the return of $200 in license fees, arguing that the 1945 ordinance under which the fees were levied conflicted with a State act.

Judge Alger Y. Barbee said he based his award on a preliminary Montgomery Circuit Court ruling of last June, which said the local 1945 taxi ordinance violated provisions of the Maryland Motor Vehicles Act.

Only $75 of the $200 in fees was awarded Bigelow, Judge Barbee said, because the operator claimed he had paid the lesser sum "under duress" when arrested by the county in 1948 for operating his cabs without the local license.

James H. Pugh, attorney for Bigelow, said yesterday that about 160 other county cab operators "probably" will also sue the county if it doesn't return the back taxes to them.

for this error in judgment on my part."

In an answering letter to Orme, McNayr stated, in part:

"Upon receipt of your letter of August 11, apologizing for your public expression in the newspapers concerning use of one-man patrol cars in the Montgomery County Police Department, and requesting reinstatement as chief of police, I presented the matter at a special meeting of the County Council.

"I have learned that many of the decisions and actions taken by you recently have been made under the handicap of severe illness in your immediate family and am convinced that under the circumstances charges pertaining to such action should be dropped."

McNayr also informed the chief of the effective date of restoration and gave assurances of "highest personal regard."

Orme's letter, in addition to containing an apology, also pleaded for reinstatement with the closing comment: "I believe that this would be to the best interests of the police department."

The one-man police car system is in use only during the 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. shift. At other hours the system reverts to the old two-man car method.

Vaughan's Position

Where the services of the middleman for Government contracts go beyond advice and introductions, where he promises his client not only the benefit of his experience and acquaintanceships but of political influence as well, there can be no doubt of the evil. It is in this connection that the name of Major General Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, crops up so frequently in the investigation of the 5-percenters. Mr. Paul Grindle, for example, told the subcommittee that James V. Hunt had boasted that he was General Vaughan's closest friend, and had added significantly that the general was the President's closest friend. Mr. Tighe E. Woods, the housing expediter, gave Mr. Grindle's statement a good deal of verisimilitude by his testimony before the committee. Mr. Woods admitted that he might never have got his job if he had never met Mr. Frank Creedon, former head of the Federal rent control office, and that he might never have met Mr. Creedon if he had not known Mr. Hunt. Mr. Woods also testified that after he had taken office General Vaughan had summoned him to the White House and demanded his help in obtaining scarce materials for some of his friends who were building a racetrack near San Francisco. And yesterday Mr. Albert J. Gross of Milwaukee, who described himself as another of Mr. Hunt's clients, told the committee about a deep-freezing unit that his concern had sent to General Vaughan. The bill for it, according to Mr. Gross' testimony, was paid by the Albert Verley Co. of Chicago, the concern which a few years ago took General Vaughan's friend, Mr. John Maragon, into its employ.

These statements do not of themselves constitute final proof that General Vaughan has been exploiting his position in the White House and his intimacy with President Truman to the profit of the 5-percenters and of other friends. All fair-minded persons will wait to hear what the general himself has to say, if he deigns to say anything, about these matters before passing judgment. But the mere fact that suspicion has attached to his name, added to the long and woeful list of his indiscretions and gaucheries, including his lust of decorations, has certainly proved him a chronic liability to his patron. In the face of all this, the President, placing sentimental associations above the dignity of his position, has refused to get rid of General Vaughan. Thus it seems to us that the time has come for the general to demonstrate his friendship for the President. If he is a true friend of Mr. Truman and not a mere parasite, he will demonstrate it by resigning, and so sparing his patron any further embarrassments.

Shopkeepers' Revolt

The woes of the government planners in Britain are growing. Britain's shopkeepers are in revolt against the government's order to reduce retail prices of utility garments, footwear, and household textiles a flat 5 per cent. At a mass meeting held in London representatives of a quarter million small establishments voted not to make the cuts until the government holds "proper" consultations with the trade organizations concerned.

If all British trade and industry were nationalized it would, of course, be possible to fix prices for goods sold at retail at any level desired. The government could then shoulder any losses resulting from the lower prices—ultimately, of course, at the expense of the taxpayers. But so long as British shopkeepers continue to own and operate their own establishments, official decrees enforcing lower prices have to be carefully adjusted to cover costs and yield reasonable profits, if those firms are to survive.

The people of this country still remember the bitter fights waged between the OPA and representatives of trade groups over OPA price decrees that cut profit margins. But at least those orders were issued only after study and consultation with business groups. The chief reason for the revolt of the British shopkeepers, it appears, was the failure of the government to hold preliminary consulations with their trade organizations to determine whether reductions were feasible. The order was denounced as "political expediency" of the worst kind, and such it appears to be, since the move was obviously intended to propitiate trade union groups clamoring for wage increases.

Price reductions achieved by official decrees of this kind do not, of course, provide a remedy for high prices resulting partly from goods shortages and partly from high production and distributive costs. At best they may squeeze profit margins, and result in limited reductions in prices, if profits are unduly high. To order sweeping reductions without first ascertaining whether the firms affected can make them and still remain in business is not only the worst kind of political expediency; it is also the worst kind of economic bungling.

Unity In Europe

The Council of Europe which is convening at Strasbourg is a meeting of a broken rather than of an integrated Europe. Never before has there been so much separatism in Europe. In economic affairs the nations all have their own currency units which have no common standard. There is no freedom of commerce, trade being forced along predetermined channels by intergovernment, or bilateral, agreements. Industry all over the continent has the solitary aim of catering to a national self-sufficiency. This separatism, of course, is the aftermath of war, which left chaos and broken ties and a sense of insecurity, so that every nation sought independent recovery.

It is unfortunate, however, that the Marshall Plan, which was inspired by the aim to recreate a working economy for Europe, has fomented separatism. It has stimulated national production to such an extent, indeed, that the European nations, which were suffering from low blood pressure, are now suffering from high blood pressure. That is to say, their production has soared beyond the prewar level, yet their trade with one another remains stagnant, because nothing has been done to remove the obstacles to its free flow. The nations have, so to speak, "dug in" with the help of their American aid. It may be, as Geoffrey Crowther says, that there will be no economic integration in western Europe till the question of security ceases to be a national one and becomes a European one. In other words, the Marshall Plan needed a security corollary. On this assumption the Atlantic Pact has been negotiated. It is an insurance that North America regards western Europe as part of its own defense area. This is the policy the lack of which, according to the French, between wars condemned them to a feeling of insecurity. They have now such a policy—and more: the Atlantic Pact will be supplied with teeth—by America. Whether, in response thereto, there will be a military organization of Europe, instead of a similar facade to the one on the economic front which goes by the initials of OEEC, is still indeterminable.

This, at any rate, is the background against which the Council of Europe is meeting at Strasbourg. It is simply a talk-shop, without any powers beyond the power coming from its august position as a forum for Europe. We do not now underrate this power. On the contrary, the Council of Europe gives faith a name and a habitation which will produce more faith and its expression in works. Of that we have no doubt. Yet the timorous opening of the Consultative Assembly, which assembled as soon as the Committee of Ministers had provided an agenda for the assembly, was disappointing. The greatness of the occasion failed to inspire greatness. This was surprising, for the salute was spoken by that fine European, Edouard Herriot, who is an illustrious exemplar of European civilization, and in whose heart burns the spirit of European unity. Judging from the cabled summaries of his oration, however, he could not refrain from expressing the French fear of German revival, and the note he struck, in consequence, seemed to be infelicitous.

The fact is that the Council of Europe, even as a talk-shop, will remain without much meaning till Germany comes in. And that invitation should be forthcoming as soon as the government is set up at Bonn. The fear expressed by Herriot hardly squares with this patent need. He failed to take cognizance of the new orientation of American and Canadian policy and the North American determination to help in the establishment of security against aggression. Fear will simply create the thing it contemplates. Works should remove the conditions that produce the fear, and they cannot all come from North America. They can be pressed upon the European governments by the Legislative Assembly which Herriot addressed. To be sure, the Assembly's terms of reference are restricted. But, so far as we can make out, they don't prohibit a constructive discussion on, say, the movement of population. If, as some authorities believe, Hitler won the demographic war, France could undo the victory by encouraging the immigration of Germans, and in this way produce a European genus. That is the kind of statesmanship that could come out of Strasbourg.

Cautious Indorsement

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder's indorsement of the bill authorizing the Export-Import Bank to guarantee private enterprise against risks of loss peculiar to foreign investment was decidedly lukewarm. He was not in a position to criticize a measure that is designed to implement in part President Truman's plan for aiding undeveloped areas and now summarized as Point IV. However, in his testimony before the Senate Banking Committee Mr. Snyder was careful to stress the primary importance of eliminating the obstacles to investment of American capital. He also pointed out that the removal of such obstacles to a free flow of private capital is primarily the responsibility of the capital-importing countries.

Mr. Snyder significantly emphasized, also, the experimental nature of the insurance program and suggested that guarantees might perhaps at the beginning be issued against the nonconvertibility of local currencies and later be extended to cover other risks, "if the situation seems to warrant it." The other risks which he indicated might be insured at the discretion of the Export-Import Bank, would be risks of expropriation by a foreign government without adequate compensation, and destruction of property incident to international war.

The Washington Post has taken the position that the Government's efforts to encourage private investment in foreign countries should be limited to negotiation of treaties insuring fair treatment to American investors, and possibly guarantees against the danger of inconvertibility of earnings into dollars. The Secretary's qualified and cautious approval of the President's more comprehensive plan merely confirms our belief that private investors should not be encouraged by Government guarantees to place their capital in countries where political conditions are highly unsettled. If they are lured there by the hope of high profits, they should be prepared to risk the chances of loss entailed by playing for high stakes.

Moreover, if the Government were to shoulder these risks, there would be great temptation to put official pressure on foreign governments to compensate the United States for the losses incurred under the guaranty system. Intervention of that kind would lead to strained international relations and create the impression that the United States was more interested in protecting the property interests of its own citizens than in furthering plans for the benefit of undeveloped countries.

Mr. Average Citizen

Mr. Hoover estimates that the average working citizen is at present contributing the earnings of 91 days of his working year to support Federal, State and local governments. And if the spending programs that have been seriously proposed were adopted, he concludes that Mr. Average Citizen would spend about one week out of every month working for the Government—that is, working to pay his taxes, direct and hidden. On any such a scale of spending, after the demands of a desirable standard of living had been met, Government spending, he concludes, would absorb from 75 to 85 per cent of the surplus income or savings of the people. Under such conditions it is evident that the Government would become "the major source of credit and capital to the economic system."

When that happens, it follows that the Government, as the chief supplier of capital, necessarily plays a dominant role in determining the volume and the character of new capital investment. In other words, it comes near to usurping the functions of the private investor and the business executive. As Mr. Hoover put it: "Along this road of spending, the Government either takes over, which is socialism, or dictates institutional and economic life, which is fascism." As a safeguard against the danger that what remains of the economy of free enterprise will vanish, he offers a simple formula: reduce spending and waste and defer some desirable things for a while. That is sound advice.

Mr. Hoover rightly puts the emphasis on the end consequences of excessive Government spending instead of attacking specific spending programs—programs that, viewed in isolation, may be wholly desirable, but which may be too expensive when added to all the other admirable spending programs, plus the outlays made necessary by past wars and the present cold war. In short, only by viewing spending programs as a whole is it possible to gauge their effect on the political and social institutions of this country.

The weakest feature of Mr. Hoover's analysis, in our opinion, is his implied assumption that taxes taken from the people represent income lost to them. "At this moment," he said, "executives and legislatures are seriously proposing projects which, if enacted, would add one third more annually to our spending. Add to these the debt service, and the average family may be paying $1900 yearly in taxes. They may get a little back if they live to over 65 years of age." Yet Mr. Hoover himself has pointed out that the money collected through taxation comes back to the public in the form of innumerable subsidies, salaries to an army of Government workers, payments to contractors, etc. Indeed, he estimates that about one person in seven is a regular recipient of Government money.

It is evident, therefore, that governments do not absorb money from the public; they act as channeling agencies, shifting income from group to group. Some individuals and groups get a great deal more from the Government in the form of benefits than they pay in taxes. Others get much less. As a matter of fact, one of the chief objectives of the so-called welfare state is to redistribute income in accordance with some sort of legislative plan, as a substitute for the free interplay of economic forces.

If that is what the American people want, Mr. Hoover's warnings will not arrest the trend toward collectivism that he fears. If, on the other hand, they want to stop short of collectivism, they will take a firm stand against an expanding scale of Government spending that, if not curbed, will take them where they don't want to go. As Mr. Hoover says, "Think it over."

MORTALITY

There lingers still within your lifeless eyes
A hunger for the true and living bread
Whereon the pilgrim spirit fain had fed;
And you whom all save one accounted wise
By every wile that wisdom might devise
To cheer her fainting children—you are dead,
And all your dreams are dust upon your head,
And all your beauty perished where it lies.

So will I take you, silent as you are,
And lay you in a grave without a name,
And yield you to the arms of earth and go
And tell my dreams to every wandering star
Whose countenance was fire before you came,
And now is ashes for the wind to blow.

DAR Vs. World Union

Formation of DAR "patriots executive committee" (your issue of August 8) to retard the federation of democracies is evidence that isolationism still lingers in a few spots.

The committee's aim is purportedly to "combat the ideals of those who would sell our American sovereignty." It is this lost sovereignty, rumbling around our anarchic planet, that makes us so feverish. No single country could acquire the power represented by that lost sovereignty except by barbarous world conquest. The sole alternative is to define that supranational power and codify international laws to control it. The most realistic approach—advocated by the Atlantic Union Committee—is through a limited federation of those countries with experience in democracy.

The DAR's belief that federation might be Communist-inspired is patently ridiculous. Surely the Kremlin tyrants would rather deal with isolated sovereign-deluded entities than face a coalition of free peoples.

The DAR also fears reducing the armed forces of the United States. Why? A combined military organization among the democracies would be stronger and cost each participant less, saving funds for more constructive purposes.

ALLAN F. MATTHEWS.
Arlington.

Since DAR opposition is traditionally based on prejudice and emotion, rather than reason, their action could be dismissed as unworthy of notice. However, the statement of Mrs. Lola Lee Bruington that the world government is "Communist inspired" is too dangerous to pass unrefuted.

War, preparation for war, and the aftermath of war, are the greatest obstacles to human freedom and happiness in the world today. The surprising thing is not that there is a movement afoot to prevent it, but that we have allowed it to plague us for so long. No one questions the reasonableness of local, State, or national law and order, or the means by which it is brought about. Yet one stubbornly refuses to extend the principle to international relations merely because that has not been done before.

The world government movement considers the safety, freedom and happiness of the individual as the ultimate object. If it is necessary to weaken the state to attain that objective so be it. R. C. TRUAX.

Dr. Gray's Resignation

May I extend a personal vote of confidence to Dr. William H. Gray who has recently resigned his post as President of our Florida A. and M. College.

It pains me beyond expression to note the reasons as given by his accusers, and the manner in which his resignation was given. In my humble opinion, Dr. William H. Gray has done an unusual, outstanding job in the promotion of the program of education for the Florida A. and M. College and the State of Florida, at large. In spite of the charges that have been publicized against him, I have yet to see the reasons for the manner in which he has been treated and it seems to me that this act is not only a reflection upon William H. Gray but upon all of us who are giving our strength and leadership to promote the educational program of our State.

Home Rule Stalled

Ten weeks have now passed since the Senate approved of the Kefauver home rule bill for the District of Columbia. By various legislative tricks a little group of willful men on the Harris subcommittee of the House District Committee have succeeded in stalling this promised legislation. In so doing, they have not only extended a little longer the power of a local oligarchy. They have also undermined the faith of thousands of people in representative government and have supplied fresh ammunition to the enemies of democracy.

Hot Weather Comfort

I am sure that nearly every male in the city of Washington has cussed and fussed about the unbearable hot weather. Also fussed and cussed about the 16 layers of cloth he is condemned to wear around his neck.

All of us would like to come to work with a wide open soft collar —no necktie. We are afraid to because no one else does.

Let's name one day of the month of August when all of us will come to work dressed in a sane comfortable shirt, no necktie, no coat. H. F. HASTINGS.

Divorce Articles

I note two of your readers (on August 8) went after Bill Brinkley's articles on divorce with such gusto that they felt conscience bound to criticize them to pieces. Yet they seemed to me merely an interesting presentation of the facts. Perhaps a bit of uncalled for levity, but why cry if we can laugh, however bitterly!

Unfortunately many people don't take the marriage rites with reverent seriousness. We cannot refuse to marry such people, because the consequences would indeed have shocking possibilities. So we have justice of the peace ceremonies and do not insist that the parties concerned understand what they say.

Better education wherever possible might breed understanding which could eliminate much divorce scandal.

I read with considerable amusement the August 8 letter by Dr. Francis J. Weiss expressing his disgust, and lambasting you for printing the divorce articles.

I didn't see anything wrong with them. Mr. Bill Brinkley did a nice job. The Private Eye was a humdinger. He always got his man.

I was afraid not to read the articles for fear that I might miss some facts. I think it was Bacon who said: "We read not to believe all we read, but to weigh and consider."

"Reorganization Check"

Please accept my congratulations on your August 6 editorial, "Reorganization Check."

Unfortunately it appears that the proposal to establish a department of welfare has not been considered on its merits by the majority of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

A very short time ago in its report on the Reorganization Act of 1949, this same committee said that "the Federal Security Agency should have been designated an executive department" when it was set up in 1939. Now, apparently the committee is of the contrary opinion, and thinks that it should not have been and should not now be so designated.

But inconsistency does not stop there. It crops up again, in the charge of Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin that Federal Security Administrator Ewing had "insulted" the committee by referring to the pressure brought to bear against this reorganization plan by the medical profession. Yet there seems no logical reason for the committee vote except the pressure of opponents, and the record will reveal a distinct medical flavor in the opposition testimony.

Ever since health insurance first became a matter of national concern, the medical profession has put out against this proposal the most voluminous and expensive publicity and pressure of recent times. Strangely, no group seems to influence elections less. Witness last year's all-out battle of the medical profession against Senator Murray, with the result that he was reelected with the biggest vote that Montana ever gave any Senator. In view of the record isn't it more than a little inconsistent that a committee of astute politicians should collapse under a flood of doctors' telegrams?

But inconsistency doesn't stop even there. In voting against the new department, the Republican members of the Senate committee repudiated the stand of two of their former Presidents—Harding and Hoover, to say nothing of their latest standard-bearer, Tom Dewey. And the Democrats who joined them turned against their own President. THOMAS A. MAIR.
Chicago.

I am glad to see The Washington Post facing the real issue in the Senate battle over the establishment of a department of welfare.

As you pointed out in your August 6 editorial, all the reorganization plan does is to reconstitute the Federal Security Agency as a department and to give its head Cabinet status. Surely the services it administers are extensive enough and important enough to warrant this change. There seems to be plenty of evidence, too, that this change in organization will make for improvements in efficiency and economy.

Can it be that self-appointed spokesmen for the medical profession have infected the committee with their animus against the Federal Security Agency and its administrator?

Administrator Ewing is an advocate of health insurance, and so is President Truman. But only the Congress can pass a health insurance law. So why the alarm? And in any case, what has this issue got to do with setting up the new department?

LILLIAN J. RUSSELL.

I should like to urge strong support for Reorganization Plan No. 1. The specious argument that action on this plan should be delayed on the grounds that the Cabinet post may fall to a particular individual should be forcefully rejected. Such an argument can arise only out of a deep-seated distrust of our democratic system. This plan should be considered and passed on its merits.

Washington Calling

Reorganization Plans

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, Dear Mr. Hoover, happy birthday! The chorus sounds across the country as Herbert Hoover observes his seventy-fifth birthday and, having taken so much public abuse, he must be genuinely surprised at the volume of praise and congratulation.

While they speak kind words about him here in Washington, the evidence grows that the birthday present which would mean most of all to Mr. Hoover may be denied to him. Or it finally may be served up in such a distorted and misshapen form as to be worthless.

That present is, of course, the carrying out of the recommendations contained in the report of the Hoover Commission on the Reorganization of the Federal Government. The former President considers the report to be the crowning work of his long career. If he could think that he had brought efficiency and economy to the sprawling bulk of the Federal bureaucracy, Mr. Hoover would indeed be happy.

Next Tuesday the Senate will consider Plan No. 1 and Plan No. 2, embodying Hoover commission recommendations. Plan No. 1, creating a department of welfare combining various agencies and bureaus seems to have little chance of approval.

PLAN NO. 2 which, in Mr. Hoover's own words, is intended to "revitalize the much-denuded Department of Labor," has a slightly better chance of being approved by a majority—at least 49 members present and voting—of the Senate. But if this happens, it will be in spite of the strenuous efforts of a lobby backed by those who in the past have professed to love Mr. Hoover most dearly.

An organization calling itself Unemployment Benefit Advisors, Inc., of Milwaukee and Chicago, has been lobbying intensively against Plan No. 2. Unemployment Benefit Advisors has had a fund of $200,000 contributed by large corporations throughout the country and especially the big auto and oil companies.

Chief change effected by Plan No. 2 would be to transfer the bureau administering the United States Employment Service and the Unemployment Insurance Service from the Federal Security Agency to the Department of Labor. The big corporations are fearful that the Department of Labor might alter the present system of "experience rating" under which they get large rebates for "stabilizing" employment.

They apparently have been encouraged in this fear by Stanley Rector, chief lobbyist for Unemployment Benefit Advisors. In a recent issue of his propaganda letter, The Advisor, Rector referred disparagingly to Hoover's "traits of character" that had "not served him so well politically."

"I do not think any reasonable employer would have prejudices on that account," Hoover told a Senate committee when asked about the danger of pressure from the unions to alter present regulation. ". . . We have to believe that the departments of Government are going to act on behalf of all the citizens of the country . . ."

"I might have to believe it," Rector noted in The Advisor, "but I won't until I have to."

EXPERTS IN THE Department of Labor say that regulations covering "experience rating," fixed by the separate State Legislatures, could not be changed by executive order. The Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments voted eight to three to disapprove Plan No. 2, although some members indicated they were reserving judgment until it came to the floor.

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report claims that recommendations already put into effect will permit annual savings of $1,250,000,000. This is based on a billion dollars saved by the armed services and 250 million dollars in the General Services bill.

But most of the recommendations are still to be considered. The seven plans now before Congress embody only 15 of the 87 steps that can be taken in this way. One of the toughest of all—public works and resources—is almost certain to be sabotaged by pork-barrelers like Senator John L. McClellan of Arkansas. House cleaning, which could be done by the bureaus and agencies without congressional action, has for the most part not been done.

If Mr. Hoover is to get his fine streamlined birthday cake, a lot more pushing will be necessary. And Congress will have to move faster than it has moved at this session.

Starlings Vs. Beetles

The hullabaloo that has been astir to "de-starling" the Nation's Capital has put red before my eyes from the beginning.

It has been established that these birds help to control the spread of Japanese beetles which are fast and furiously riddling everything in their path. It is shocking to see beetles clustered like grapes completely covering plants and trees in many areas. It is just as shocking to realize that from their prevalence it is obvious that the residents in these areas are slack in not doing more to exterminate these pests.

If humanity doesn't care, evidently Mother Nature does and has stepped in through the aid of the starling. Why not import more of these energetic little birds rather than do away with those we have?

Matter Of Fact

The Invisible Crisis

LONDON. It is now startlingly clear that a bold new attack on the economic crisis which is bedeviling the free world is essential if that world is to survive. Otherwise one of two things is almost certain to happen.

Either the free world will split apart economically, into two great, mutually antagonistic blocs—which means in the end that it will split apart politically. Or the vast sterling area will simply disintegrate, and British power, the essential ingredient of a successful attempt to contain Soviet expansion, will disintegrate also.

These, in capsule form, are the views of most informed men, both British and American, in London today. Yet in this lovely summer weather, in this wonderfully bright and gay and prosperous-seeming London, it is remarkably difficult to believe that anything is seriously wrong.

The heart of London is so bright that it has an almost Mediterranean look. A water-blasting process has stripped the grime of centuries off the sooty buildings and turned them white. Here and there is a craggy, blackened reminder of the recent past, but there is new paint everywhere, and there are luxury goods in the shops, and gay crowds in Hyde Park, and a general air of all being well with the world. Here, the visitor might suppose, is the London of the great days of power and prosperity—"happy and glorious, ever victorious."

Every evidence of the senses—the warmth of the sun, the smell of summer in the parks, the red brightness of the new uniforms of the palace guard—seems to belie the existence of a crisis. This fact itself deepens the crisis. To most Englishmen, the crisis is not real, because it is invisible. It is figures on a piece of paper. It is not an empty belly and the old hopeless search for work. Yet it may soon become just that.

A FEW FIGURES, which are really as simple as schoolboy arithmetic, tell why. The whole sterling area, which comprises a third of the world's trade, has a gold and dollar reserve now little more than a billion and a half dollars. This shriveling kitty is what keeps the economy of the sterling area ticking over. It is like the liquid reserve of a great bank. As with any bank, as the reserve shrinks frighteningly, the depositors begin to panic, trying every device to get their money out before it is too late.

Yet until very recently it seemed (as it must have seemed to many about-to-be-ruined bankers) that the reserves would just hold out, that the nervous depositors would calm down, that the bank would squeak through. The year 1948 was much better than disastrous 1947. And the first quarter of this year was better still. With about a billion dollars expected from ECA and other sources, it seemed pretty certain that the dollar deficit would be covered, and the vital reserve would hold steady.

Then, with dramatic suddenness, in the second quarter of this year, everything went terribly wrong. The annual dollar deficit rate (that is, the yearly amount the British are spending in dollar countries more than they are selling in dollars) suddenly doubled, shooting up to two and a half billion dollars.

It is only necessary to work a very simple sum to grasp the meaning of this. Take two and a half billion—the rate of deficit. Subtract a billion—what the British expected from ECA and other sources. You have a billion and a half. This is just about what is left in the kitty. Thus, at the present rate, by next June, there will be nothing left in the kitty at all. The bank will be bust. The whole great sterling area will tend to come apart at the seams. And the British Isles will be faced with something pretty close to total ruin.

This is the crisis. These are the figures which have sent Sir Stafford Cripps to a Swiss sanitarium, and which mean so little to the gay crowds in Hyde Park.

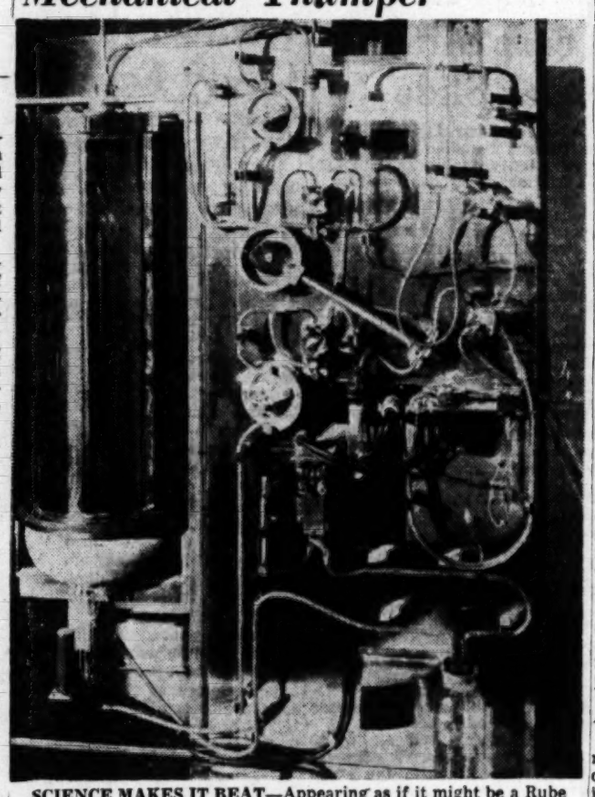
THE FIGURES are probably not quite so terrible as they seem. Eventually, the British may get some of the extra share of Marshall aid they have asked for. They hope to get more gold from South Africa. Cripps will trim dollar imports into the sterling area by some hundreds of millions. Devaluation may slow the terrified flight from the pound. The impact of the economic dip in the United States may ease off. And so on.

This sort of thing may slow the drain on the last reserves, but it will not stop it. Meanwhile, the drain continues, dollar by dollar, like blood dripping from an unhealed wound. What is needed is a bold and drastic operation to heal the wound. One sort of operation is obvious. It is to try to erect a separate and artificial economy, insulated against the magnetism of the American economy. This is, in fact, the direction in which Cripps' dollar cuts, stiffening controls and bilateral deals are pointing.

There may be no alternative. But it is certainly worth looking for one. For historically this sort of economic separation inevitably leads to political separation. And there is nothing, nothing at all, which would more clearly assure the realization of Soviet ambitions than a sharp, angry split between the United States and Great Britain.

Mechanical 'Thumper'



SCIENCE MAKES IT BEAT—Appearing as if it might be a Rube Goldberg gadget, this is the artificial heart. It has not been used on humans but has kept dogs alive 46 minutes

Artificial Heart Lends Hope to Surgeons

"If one could operate on a relatively quiet, bloodless heart, the surgical repair of many heart disorders could be accomplished quite readily," Dr. Blalock said.

Operations envisioned with use of the machine include surgery for repair of heart valves damaged by rheumatic fever, for embolisms (blood clots), congenital heart defects, and other heart ills.

The machine as presently constituted would be of scant value in sudden heart seizures such as coronary thrombosis, which strikes without warning. Preliminary tests take too much time. However, it might be suited as a substitute heart in recuperation from such attacks, or in cases of hardening of the coronary (heart) arteries to give the human heart a restful chance to make its own repair.

But these are only possible future applications for a machine which to date has been used only on cats and dogs—and healthy animals at that.

Dr. Gibbon's artificial heart is not the only such machine under development. The National Heart Institute, custodian of Federal funds to aid and direct heart research, recently announced a grant of $21,627 to Dr. Clarence Dennis, of the University of Minnesota, for "development of a pump oxygenator to replace the heart and lungs of human patients for brief periods."

Still other scientists in the United States and Europe are wresting with the same problems, but with differing approach.

The Philadelphia machine graphically illustrates what man must do to duplicate, even to a slight degree, what nature has done so much better. Whereas the human heart is about the size of a small coconut, the machine designed to take its place but temporarily is only slightly smaller than an upright piano.

Its complicated system of tubing, pumps and electronic circuits is encased in a cabinet which keeps it air-conditioned to body temperature throughout operation.

In that operation, veins returning used blood to the heart are tied off, and the blood is drawn by a pump into the artificial heart machine. Here, it is sprayed on the "lungs," a revolving drum which rolls at the same speed and in the same direction as the incoming blood.

The action spreads the blood in a thin film over the monel metal cylinder. It is then oxgenated, in duplication of the lungs' function, by exposure to a stream of almost pure oxygen.

Thus oxygenated, the blood collects in a cup where it is sucked up and sent back to the body by a second pump. This blood is not pumped directly into the aorta, main artery trunk of the body's blood-feeding system, but reaches the aorta through smaller arteries.

The refreshed blood is able to reach the coronary arteries which feed the heart muscles. It is blocked, however, from filling the heart chambers by the aortic valve and that valve's closing function against back-flowing blood.

Since the blood initially withdrawn is taken from the superior vena cava, heartside reservoir for used blood going to the heart, and is returned only as far as the aortic valve, the starting point for fresh blood leaving the heart, it leaves the heart virtually free of blood—an ideal condition for heart surgery, or for heart rest.

There are many problems. For one thing, heparin, the blood's "oil" to help prevent clotting, has to be added in the processing. And the machine's pumps must be constantly regulated to make certain more, or less, blood isn't being withdraw than returned.

Electronic eyes must regulate the pumps to the fluid level of the cup which collects the oxygenated blood for its return to the body. The pumps simply can't be run at the same speed because of the differences in tubing diameters and other mechanical factors.

These and other difficulties even harder to master make the use of the artificial heart on humans so remote and so problematical. But the development of an antificial heart for humans has advanced considerably since Dr. Alexis Carrel and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh disclosed development, in 1935, of a "glass heart" for the maintenance of body tissues outside the body.

There is one heart affliction for which the artificial heart is not designed. That is neurocirculatory asthenia, variously called the neurasthenic heart, the anxiety neurosis, soldier's heart, or just plain nervous breakdown.

The affliction is characterized by breathlessness, giddiness, sense of fatigue, pain in the chest (perhaps pseudoangina), and palpitations of the heart. The patient is extremely conscious of heart activity, but the doctors can find no organic change in the great organ.

Case histories compiled from among the sufferers have shown that those afflicted with neurocirculatory asthenia, despite their very real distresses, live as long if not longer than healthy persons with no heart complaints. Cardiologists are concerned, however, lest the complaining diagnose their own pains as coming from the head rather than the heart when the symptoms might really stem from organic heart disorders.

Nitroglycerin tablets are often prescribed for pseudo-anginal pains as well as for true anginal pain. Laboratory tests have shown that the explosive ingredient quickly dilates the arteries, increasing the oxygen supply to heart muscles, an action acutely needed in coronary insufficiency.

Medical, surgical and diagnostic advances against heart complaints already accomplished and the future prospect of even greater advances can be attributed to the medical schools, the American Heart Association, research funds made available by life insurance companies and foundations, and the U. S. Public Health Service.

The medical schools pioneered heart research. Then the American Heart Association, begun as an organization of doctors interested in heart studies, stepped in to advance the cause.

The professional organization set up standards for heart clinics now operated by hospitals throughout United States. It promoted a standard nomenclature for heart ills, ending the death certificate catch-all "acute indigestion" for heart deaths. It later assailed "chronic endocarditis" and "chronic myocarditis" and similar almost meaningless terms in diagnosis.

Later, some life insurance companies and foundations concerned with the increase in heart disease deaths set up funds to combat the disease, man's greatest enemy. The increase has been attributed by some to the facts that medical science has made such great inroads against other killing diseases, and by others to more accurate diagnosis and better statistical methods.

The United States Public Health Service, and the United States Childrens Bureau added force to the fight on heart disease. And more impetus was added several years ago when the American Heart Association was opened to lay membership and funds-raising campaigns were begun to finance education of the public to the heart disease menace and to finance further research.

Finally, last summer, Congress authorized creation of the National Heart Institute, a new unit of the National Institutes of Health, at Bethesda, Md.

Much heart research now receiving Federal aid through the National Heart Institute is directed at ferreting out the basic causes of heart disease. Other projects are directed at improving old treatments and developing new treatments and methods of diagnosis.

But the National Heart Institute is also willing to take chances on helping out promising surgeons with new ideas. In a recent distribution of grants, NHI announced it was awarding $34.83 to Dr. J. Moore Campbell of the University of Oklahoma to finance his work on a plastic aortic valve.

As explained by one of the institute's advisory council members: "If the Heart Institute can't take some long shots, then we don't deserve to operate."

Social Worker Suspended for 'Disrespect'

Thomas R. English, District Welfare Department social worker, yesterday was ordered suspended for 60 days for being "grossly disrespectful" to his superior on several occasions.

The order was issued by the District commissioners, acting on the recommendation of Lawrence Koenigsberger, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals, who held hearings on four charges made against English.

The Board of Public Welfare, to whom Koenigsberger's findings had been referred, had recommended dismissal rather than suspension, but the Commissioners decided this was too severe.

Koenigsberger also had recommended that English be given another assignment in the department away from his present superior, Mrs. Ruth Hubbard, but the Commissioners said such a change is up to the Public Welfare Board. English resides at 3000 30th st. se. His 60-day suspension will run from the middle of last month when his annual leave expired.

Polio in U. S. Still Rising, But Rate of Increase Dips

The number of polio cases in the Nation still is mounting, but the rate of increase is slackening, according to figures released yesterday by the Public Health Service.

A total of 2451 cases was reported for the week ending Saturday, August 6, 25 per cent more than the previous week. The last two weeks of July showed a 36 per cent and a 42 per cent increase, respectively.

The total for the year now is 10,748 cases. There were 7030 cases in the comparable period in 1948, a near-record year.

One encouraging indication in the report was the fact that "only nine States reported increases of more than 20 cases, principally in the North Central and Eastern areas."

They are:

New York, which increased from 200 new cases two weeks ago to 390 new ones last week; New York City showing an increase from 150 to 277.

Illinois: From 145 to 250; New Jersey, 27 to 81; Massachusetts, 33 to 82; Ohio, 65 to 99; North Dakota, 18 to 48; Texas, 95 to 121; California, 87 to 112, and Pennsylvania, 17 to 29.

Only New Polio Case Is in Prince Georges

The only Greater Washington area to report a new polio case yesterday was Prince Georges County—an 8-year-old girl from the 3300 block of Chancey st., Mount Rainier. She was the county's eighteenth victim.

To date this year, the toll in Greater Washington communities is: District, 24 cases; Arlington, 8; Montgomery County, 9; Alexandria, 5; Fairfax County, 4.

The Gallup Poll

Plan for Welfare Department Given Majority Voter Support

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 11.—President Truman's plan to create a Federal department of welfare, headed by a Cabinet member, has a good deal of popular appeal throughout the country.

Creation of such a department was one of the recommendations made by the special commission headed by former President Herbert Hoover for reorganization of Government operations. Last week a Senate committee held public hearings on the plan, but turned in an adverse report to the Senate. A fight over the measure is expected on the Senate floor.

Opinion among a representative cross-section of voters in all the 48 States was sounded on the plan in the following survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion:

"It has been suggested that a Secretary (in the President's Cabinet) be appointed to head a new Department of Public Welfare in Washington which would include such things as social security, public health, and education. Do you approve or disapprove of this?"

The vote:

Approve	54%
Disapprove	26
No opinion	20

A fairly sharp division of sentiment along party lines was found in the survey. A substantial majority of persons who voted for Mr. Truman last November expressed favorable opinions on the creation of a welfare department.

Among Republicans, sentiment was much more closely divided, as follows:

	Truman Voters	Dewey Voters
Approve	61%	45%
Disapprove	20	38

SUNDAY: GERVASI REPORTS ON THE POPE VS. COMMUNISM

Why did Pope Pius XII last month take a step that might lose his church millions of members?

Writing from Italy, Post Correspondent Frank Gervasi tells you this Sunday of the tremendous effect the Papal decree has had among Europe's Catholics.

The factors at stake between Catholics and Communists, the conflict now faced by Catholics behind the Iron Curtain, and reaction in the various quarters of Italy are reviewed first-hand by Gervasi.

Don't miss his report this Sunday in Section II of The Washington Post.

LEWIS & THOS. SALTZ
QUALITY SINCE 1867

Certainly we are busy!

If you come to our mid-year sale you will find many people in our store. You will be impressed by the kind of men and women who choose to save money at this time. They are not "bargain seekers". They do not frequent "ordinary sales". Most of them are simply wise people with foresight who realize that buying here and now for present and future needs is a sure way of purchasing fine quality and making real savings.

Even the greatest wealth cannot buy finer merchandise. And in these days of inflation, nobody can afford to ignore prices—and saving money.

2% of Plants Produce Half Of U. S. Goods

Less than 2 per cent of the nation's factories do nearly half of the nation's business, the Census Bureau reported.

The bureau said 4664 plants (out of a total of 240,881) employ 500 or more persons each.

These plants, the report added, accounted for almost half of the total production as measured by value added to materials by manufacture into finished articles.

The bureau said less than 1 per cent of the nation's factories—the 1935 which employ more than 1000 persons each—accounted for about one third of the total employment (14,294,304) and of the value added by manufacture ($74,425,825,000).

The bureau's figures came from its 1947 census of manufactures, the first comprehensive factory count since 1940.

The bureau report had this to say about small factories:

"The 70,384 factories each employing less than five persons, although representing 29 per cent of the number of plants, accounted for only 1.1 per cent of the employment and 1.2 per cent of value added by manufacture.

"Nearly half of the establishments had fewer than 10 employes each and accounted for only 3.3 per cent of the employment and 3.2 percent of value added."

POWER SALES: Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported July sales of 192,823,738 kilowatt hours, an increase of 5.48 per cent over the same 1948 month. For the District of Columbia alone, sales of electrical energy in July totaled 161,935,930 kilowatt hours, up 3.66 per cent

ODD LOTS: Current rumor is that Western Electric Co. is working on a coin telephone with a dime slot for local calls . . . Auto output this week is estimated at 142,262 units, against 142,861 last week . . . Reflecting more rapid changes in used car prices, the Official Used Car Guide published by the National Automobile Dealers Used Car Guide Co. of Washington will be published hereafter on a monthly basis . . . Canada has announced its intention of offering a 100-million-dollar government bond issue for sale in the United States and will file its SEC registration "in the near future" . . . American Airlines increased its airfreight operations more than 50 per cent in the first half of 1949 as compared with the same 1948 period.

FURNITURE: Washington furniture sales in June increased 5 per cent over the same 1948 month, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. For the first six months this year, local furniture sales were 11 per cent ahead of the like period last year. The figures are based on reports from six leading dealers here. The Fifth Reserve District as a whole showed a 5 per cent decline in furniture sales for June and a 3 per cent dip for the six-month period.

EARNINGS: American Woolen Co., Inc., reported net income of $872,264 or 36 cents a common share for the first half this year, compared with $9,958,379 or $9.92 a share in the same 1948 period. Other earnings reports:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Grains ended a dreary session with moderate losses on the Board of Trade today.

The market started out firm in all pits except corn, where little buying enthusiasm could be aroused following news of overnight rains in Iowa. With corn lagging, the rest of the market did not get far. About midway in the session everything turned around and worked lower to the close.

Wheat ended ¾-⅞ lower, corn was ⅜-1⅝ lower, oats were ⅛-⅝ lower, rye was 2 to 2¾ lower, soybeans were ¾ to 2 cents lower and lard was 10 to 20 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Parchment Wads May Be Bible Text

London, Aug. 11 (AP).—A British scientist, working delicately with blackened wads of ancient parchment, is making progress toward solving what might be one of the world's most priceless jigsaw puzzles.

The scraps of brittle paper he is striving to separate may contain words and sentences of the first written Hebrew texts of the Old Testament books.

Dr. Harold J. Plenderleith, a chemist who heads the research laboratory at the British Museum, has been working for three months trying to separate the decomposed pages without destroying them so scholars can read them.

The scrolls were scraped and sifted from the floor of a cave near the Dead Sea. They are what was left to archaeologists after an Arab shepherd boy two years ago led explorers to the well-preserved scrolls containing books of the Bible.

Dr. Plenderleith said the scrolls had been wrapped in linen and sealed in jars containing pitch. However, he said 2100 years had made the parchment extremely brittle and part of it had decomposed into black carbonite.

Scientists are convinced the writings were sealed in he jars some 150 years before the birth of Christ.

Dr. Plenderleih now has about 100 pieces separated, matched and ready for Hebrew experts to read. The writing is in carbon ink which stands out after the parchment is bleached. The letters are in both ancient Classical Hebrew and a Hebrew colloquial dialect of the time.

Baldies Comb Club's Ranks For Phonies'

Knutson

It's the National Baldheaded Association, Inc., whose 150-odd members all answer to the name of "Curly."

The association was founded at the summer home of former Representative Harold Knutsen of Minnesota, himself a prominent baldy. It grew out of a St. Cloud, Minn., organization that boasted such members as James Farley and Frank Walker, former Postmasters General, and Movie Actor Don Ameche.

With a brand-new charter, the NBA hopes to recruit a lot of talent, but some stern rules are involved.

Toupees are tabu and the use of hair-restorers is unthinkable. And the NBA frowns on the gent who lets his side-fringe grow and then combs the lean strands over his bald spot.

"We don't want any phonies," said Charles Rieger of Minneapolis, the new second front row sitter of the outfit (or vice president). "Most of us are egg-bald and we can tell the insincere joiner as far away as you can spot Knutson's shine."

Rieger produced a membership card, which has a cluster of seven bald pates as viewed from the top. The NBA offers $10 to anyone who can identify the heads. So far, nobody has collected.

New Police Radio Helps Get Thief On Four Charges

General Lewis Griffin, whose arrest Wednesday helped prove the merit of an experimental radio hookup being tried out by Alexandria police, was found guilty of four theft charges in the city's police court yesterday and held for grand jury action on two others.

Griffin, 31, of 521 N. Henry st., was arrested by Policeman Charles Baber while Baber was operating a motorcycle in which an experimental radio receiver had just been installed. Caught with a typewriter which had been reported stolen only nine minutes earlier, he later was implicated in six additional thefts through a quantity of loot found in his room.

Judge James R. Duncan said he would sentence Griffin August 24 on the four petty larceny charges on which he was convicted yesterday.

Seas Yield 1 Body After 4 Drown in Outing Aftermath

Inverness, Nova Scotia, Aug. 11 (AP).—Treacherous seas today yielded one body after claiming four—and possibly six—lives Wednesday night in the tragic aftermath to a teen-agers' outing.

The body recovered was identified as that of Malcolm Killis, 16, of Inverness.

Others drowned when a 40-man human chain failed to rescue them were Gerald MacNeil, 14; Simon White, 59, and his son Melvin, 27. All were of Inverness.

Two others were believed missing. They were thought to have been at the end of the human chain, swept into the sea by a sucking undertow.

The Whites had gone to the rescue of the two youths and all four were caught in the undertow. When the hastily formed chain parted, 10 persons were swept into the sea.

British Jet Reported Threat to U. S. Airliners

By the United Press

Civil Aeronautics Administrator Delos W. Rentzel has told Congress that Great Britain's new jet-powered airliner is a serious threat to United States manufacturers of air transports, it was revealed yesterday.

The Senate Commerce Committee made public Rentzel's testimony that American plane makers must step up their plans if they want to develop anything like the new British-built De Havilland Comet. The Comet is the world's first jet-powered airliner, he said.

Mrs. Kasenkina Plans Freedom Leap Prayers

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Mrs. Oksana Kasenkina, the Russian school teacher who jumped to freedom from a Soviet consulate window, plans to observe the first anniversary of her leap Friday by going to church and offering prayers of thanksgiving for her recovery.

Mrs. Kasenkina, 53, who suffered near-fatal injuries in her jump from a third floor window, also will pray for her three sisters in Russia, although she fears they are beyond the help of prayers.

Guatemala Cabinet Quits

Guatemala, Guatemala, Aug. 11 (AP).—An official announcement said today the cabinet had resigned to allow President Juan Jose Arevalo to form a new government. The action was taken in view of recent domestic and international developments, the announcement said.

Briton Blasts Americans For Keeping Bible Scrolls

Oxford, England, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Prof. Godfrey Rolles Driver, world Bible authority at Oxford University, today accused Americans of gross selfishness in keeping to themselves the Old Testament scrolls found recently in Palestine.

"American Biblical experts have had about seven of these fabulously valuable Hebrew scrolls in their possession for more than a year without allowing European scholars the chance to study them," he said.

The documents were sold to Jewish antiquary experts, he said, and about 7 of the 11 later were sent to the United States.

"American experts on Semitic languages are not in the same class as European scholars, primarily because they have not had as much experience in dealing with original documents of this sort," Driver declared.

"The idea for taking them to America seems to have been, 'How much money can we make out of it,' rather than of what valuable importance they will be to the world in general," he asserted.

The professor said there never had been a discovery to compare with the find of the Old Testament scrolls.

Naming of Negro By AMA Called 'Political Capital'

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP).—A prominent Negro physician today accused the American Medical Association of making "political capital" out of the appointment of a Negro to its House of Delegates.

The charge came from Dr. J. M. Cobb, head of the anatomy department of Howard University, Washington, D. C. Dr. Cobb is here for the convention of the National Medical Association, a Negro group.

He referred to AMA statements in announcing the appointment of Dr. Peter H. Murray, director of the department of gynecology at Harlem Hospital, New York. In its announcement, the AMA attacked President Truman's national health insurance program.

Dr. Cobb said the AMA was attempting to get the Negro medical group's backing for its campaign against the program.

3 Boys Get $135 From Drug Store

Harry Schermerhorn, manager of Tate's Drug Store, 1107 G st. nw., told police that three boys, believed to be from 15 to 17 years old, snatched $135 in $5 bills from the cash register in the store shortly after 6 p. m. yesterday.

When last seen — they were boarding a streetcar northbound on 11th st. Police were unable to trace them.

Lavish Gambling Has Pious Payoff

By Richard L. Coe

"THE GREAT SINNER," or "Down to the Drips in Chips," is another Emgeemlet on the horrors of gambling.

What started this latest Hollywood epidemic I don't know and shudder to imagine, but true to its position as the celluloid city's biggest studio, M-G-M has two big entries in the great gambling cycle while other studios are put to it to grind out but one. Clark Gable's "Any Number Can Play" moved off F st. yesterday, which brought this, Metro's other entry, to the Palace.

A cycle about the roulette wheels and cards is, of course, a natural. For years now we've been seeing the celluloid folk winning and losing at tables but now someone's discovered that you too can play if the camera follows the game closely enough.

The obvious pitfall in bringing you the excitements of gambling lies in the fact that no movie can very well plump in favor of this wasteful vice. Ways must be found to show it doesn't pay. So in "Any Number Can Play" Clark Gable got heart trouble. In "The Lady Gambles" Barbara Stanwyck was found to have had an unhappy childhood.

In "The Great Sinner" Metro slides home on God. The last 10 minutes is a renunciation scene of colossal piety in a cathedral twice the size of any in Weisbaden, with full orchestra, heavenly choirs and the sign of the cross to keep shattered Gregory Peck from robbing the poor box so he can have another go in the casino. The trouble is that the finale is so obviously synthetic and that the preceding scenes at the tables are fraught with such honest, if base, emotion.

"THE GREAT SINNER." M-G-M release produced by Gottfried Reinhardt. Screen play by Ladislaw Fodor and Christopher Isherwood from a story by Fodor and Rene Fueloep-Miller. Music arranged by Bronislau Kaper. Photographed by George Folsey. Directed by Robert Siodmak. At the Palace.

Star-Banked Cast

But you can't say Metro hasn't given you a time while it lasts—and heaven knows, "The Great Sinner" lasts.

You get Ava Gardner as a femme fatale of nineteenth-century Weisbaden luring men to the tables of her rich lover, pawning bracelets with rubies the size of robins' eggs and talking with that grammar school voice that now makes me think her acting career must be the result of a shell game.

There's Walter Huston, his Midwest drawl unimpaired behind a Russian beard, as Ava's grasping father, willing to sell his daughter for his gambling debts.

Frank Morgan is on view twice, once as a mathematics professor who commits suicide because he has no money left to play and, later, as the professor's ghost who urges our hero to do the same.

Melvyn Douglas holds the bank, Ava's future and the mask of cynicism expected from casino proprietors.

Ethel Barrymore is in it—for all of eight minutes—as Huston's mother, a matriarch who carries her silver coffin about with her and who learns about cards late in life, so all-embracingly it kills her.

Gregory's Rapid Fall

But their troubles are nothing to Gregory Peck's. As a traveling author, he just happened into Weisbaden because his eye caught Ava's on a train. For half the picture he's flat against gambling and tells Ava exactly what a good man should. At this, Love Dawns, and though Ava has now seen the light, she has also passed along her green-baize passion to Gregory.

Gregory's descent is swift and terrible. He breaks the bank his first night, but by the next he's lost all royalty rights to his past AND FUTURE books, a state in which the picture rather forgetfully leaves him in its excitement over the power of stained glass windows.

Musically, the largesse of "The Great Sinner" is lush. The "musical score by Bronislau Kaper" filches at random, a high point being the Venusburg music from "Tannhauser" to accompany Gregory's degredation at the casino. As for the words, you'll note that Christopher Isherwood is coauthor of the screen play. "The Descent of F-6" indeed.

As you can see, "The Great Sinner" is massively lavish, highly moral and, believe me, madly entertaining.

Capehart's Daughter Working 'for a Lark'

Northeast Harbor, Me., Aug. 11 (AP).—The daughter of Indiana's Senator Capehart is working as a waitress at this summer resort's biggest hotel—"for a lark"—she said today.

Miss Patricia Capehart, 20, said she wanted to find out what it was like to work as a waitress.

Powell and Winters Team Up in Fast Chiller

By Orval Hopkins

THE last time I said anything good about a movie, people accused me of selling out to the theaters (this is by no means an impossibility) and treated me otherwise to gratuitous insults.

Nonetheless, I'll say that "Take One False Step," at the Capitol, is bright and shiny stuff and that Irwin Shaw and Chester Erskine, who combined to get the thing on the block, may step up and collect their medals at any time.

William Powell and Shelley Winters are starred in "Take One False Step." Powell is pretty much as you've always (anyway, it seems like always) seen him—suave, handsome and in good voice. Miss Winters is excellent as a lovely, neurotic young lady who keeps trying to lure Powell into all kinds of horrible pleasures.

Take one false step and they got you, is the obvious admonition here. Powell in this movie takes one very small false step and you never saw anybody get into so many jams. The cops are after him on one side, a gang of hoods on the other. He's trying to start a new college, his wife is showing up any minute, this girl is missing and everybody is blaming him, the man who's going to angel the college hates scandal. He's really in it.

I'm not sure they wound everything up yet, but it was all very pleasant, very professional. They let somebody with a heavy hand loose in the comedy department once or twice, but it doesn't show much. The musical score bothered me the entire time. Maybe it won't you. I suspect they hauled out an old gadget in the matter of a rabid dog biting a man, but I'll forgive even that.

Miss Winters, to harp a little, does very well as one of the ladies of the piece. I also liked Sheldon Leonard (who is going to be a big romantic one of these days, mark you) as a detective, and Howard Freeman, who gives a wonderful short description of the symptoms and effects of hydrophobia.

"TAKE ONE FALSE STEP." Universal-International release produced by Chester Erskine. Screen play by Irwin Shaw and Chester Erskine from a story "Night Call," by Irwin and David Shaw. Photographed by Frank Planer. Music by Walter Scharf. Directed by Erskine. At the Capitol.

On the stage at the Capitol are Leon Fields, who is pretty funny in an impression of Ted Lewis but who needs a new opening; Terry Lawlor, a lovely lady who sings; Duval, a skilled and engaging magician, and the Vanderbilt Boys, who I happily thought were going to be tap dancers but who turn out to be acrobats, good ones.

The cartoon is terrible.

What's become of the newsreel? We had some shots of people dropping supplies to a weather station in the Alps and of some other people testing a jet-propelled airplane. Is television doing this? Where is everybody?

Milt Slosser plays some fine songs on the organ at the Capitol. It's almost the most enjoyable interlude on the program.

IBC Needs Customers

Charles Just Can't Draw in New York

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, AUG. 11.—They were thinking about hanging out a "Help Wanted—Customers" sign in front of the International Boxing Corporation's offices today.

And if they did you couldn't blame them. The biggest syndicate in boxing history isn't doing too well. The IBC has every name fighter at its command, enough dough to finance a loan to China, yet it hasn't made enough money to keep its New York matchmaker, Al Weill, in cigars.

Last night's Ezzard Charles-Gus Lesnevich scuffle was its second flop. The Yankee Stadium program grossed only $78,000. The other big turkey was the Marcel Cerdan-Jake LaMotta middleweight championship fight in Detroit.

Incidentally, Charles' share of the gate was a measly $18,598—slim pickings for a heavyweight champ and he had to split that up with his assorted stable of managers.

The Jim Norris-Joe Louis syndicate has one fair-to-middlin' success under its belt, the Charle-Joe Walcott Chicago NBA title fight. Out of that was to emerge the fighter who would be the organization's meal ticket. But 'tain't so.

Charles simply isn't a drawing card in New York. In a couple of Madison Square Garden appearances, the overgrown Cincinnati light-heavyweight didn't attract enough customers to keep the place warm.

But Charles, heavyweight champion everywhere except in Col. Eddie Eagan's offices, (Ed. note—and Virginia, as of last night) is their baby and the IBC will stick with him rather than be stuck without him.

CHARLES IS NOT a knockout puncher. He showed that against the 34-year-old battered Lesnevich last night. Joe Louis would have squashed the same Lesnevich in three rounds at the most. And it took Charles seven.

In New York, where the big money in boxing lies, you must be a puncher to attract customers. Since Charles isn't, the IBC plans to shift his attractions to the Midwest, where he's done most of his campaigning.

For local consumption, boxing's one happy monopoly will offer Ray Robinson, Rocky Graziano, Jake LaMotta, Charles Fusari and Steve Belloise, boys with zing in their gloves.

They've got Robinson and Belloise, LaMotta and Cerdan, and Fusari and Graziano already carded for matches. There'll be pay-days for all in each of the bouts and that'll make the IBC happy.

They would be much happier, however, if they could produce a heavyweight with crowd appeal.

MIKE JACOBS made a ton of money for himself and Joe Louis when the Bomber was knocking 'em stiff and the IBC knows it must have a heavyweight as its chief meal ticket.

The 28-year-old Ezzard is a crafty, good fighter, but he has no punch in the ring and no ring at the cash drawer, where fighting success is measured.

New York won't recognize Charles as champion until he's fought either Bruce Woodcock, the truck-driving Britisher, or Lee Savold, member of the Jersey Bartenders' Union.

But the IBC isn't too worried about its heavyweight or present financial problems. They comfort themselves by thinking of the good hauls they'll make with the Robinsons, LaMottas and Grazianos in New York.

And if Charles, by this time, still doesn't pull 'em in at the gate the IBC won't worry either. They can solve this by having their chief matchmaker, Joe Louis, match himself with Charles.

Even New Yorkers would recognize this as something more than just a mere heavyweight fight.

'I'm Thick,' Says Harry

Gilmer Just Can't Get Going; He's in Shape—But That's All

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 11—"I'm thick."

Harry Gilmer said it about himself, so it should be all right to repeat it. He was talking about his performance in yesterdy's long scrimmage in which the Washington Redskins looked awful.

He might have added that in addition to having trouble learning the T-formation plays, he's passing like a freshman tackle, faking with the deftness of a steam roller and generally running a sad fourth behind Sammy Baugh, Tommy Mont and Bob Hainlen in the quarterback department. The Redskins have only four quarterbacks.

To date Gilmer is the big disappointment of the Skins' training camp. The Alabama Whizz who threw observers into raptures last fall, before getting his leg banged up, can boast of only one thing so far—he's in shape. He now weighs 165 pounds, twelve more than when he reported, and his damaged leg is as good as ever.

But his timing is completely lacking, a failing which annoys Head Coach Billick Whelchel but doesn't leave him particularly downcast. The whole Redskin offense has been ragged in both its heavy scrimmages and in light drills.

Whelchel's main pleasure these days is in the calibre and performances of his defensive players. Veterans like John "Tree" Adams, Al Demao and Clyde Ehrhardt, Sam Goldman, Joe Tereshinski, John Steber and Howie Livingston have worked well and hard. Newcomers Dick Stovall, scrappy guard from Abilene Christian, and Southern California's Bob Hendren, biggest man on the squad at tackle, appear certain to help the club.

Right now the Redskins appear able to hold the score down in almost any game. That's hardly the way to win 'em, however.

In camp and seeking a job with the Redskins is Tony Compagno, halfback of last year's Pittsburgh Steelers . . . Owner George Marshall isn't particularly interested since it isn't certain whether Compagno has his release from the Steelers . . . Mike Roussos, soph tackle, went to a doctor with an inflamed eye today . . . It was the second one he had damaged in yesterday's scrimmage . . . A finger was stuck in one eye and he went to the bench briefly . . . When he was called back to action another finger found his other eye . . . Tackle John Konisezewski was back in the thick of things, his chest practically healed . . . He suffered carbolic acid burns from his T-shirt stencilling several days ago . . . Halfback Eddie Saenz returns for light workouts tomorrow after having his tonsils removed Tuesday . . . Saturday the squad will be complete when Halfback Bob Goode and Tackles Len Szafaryn and Laurie Niemi fly in from the All-Star game in Chicago.

—Limited Taboo—

'Skins 'Hear' Rivals Play

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 11.—With few exceptions the Washington Redskins have undergone a two-hour "blackboard drill" every night since setting up their training camp here.

Last night the drill was cut to less than an hour by head coach Billick Welchel.

A newspaper reporter jokingly asked the retired admiral if his team would be allowed to listen to a radio description of the game between the Los Angeles Dons and the San Francisco 49-ers. Even mention of the rival All-America Conference heretofore has been taboo among the Redskins.

It was apparently the first time Welchel had thought of the game.

"What time does it start?" he wanted to know.

Eight-thirty, he was told.

Eagles Face 10-Point Underdog Stars Tonight

By Charles Dunkley

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Philadelphia's Eagles, champions of the National Football League, are a 10-point favorite to defeat a band of 70 College All-Stars before an expected 95,000 to 100,000 spectators in flood-lighted Soldier Field tomorrow night.

The All-Star game, now in its sixteenth year, usually gives the professionals an edge before the kickoff. The Eagles have the advantage of maturity and experience. They also are a well-knit unit carried over from last year's successful campaign when they defeated the Chicago Cardinals for the title in frosty Shibe Park in Philadelphia.

However, the record shows that the All-Stars frequently have triumphed when few believed victory possible—such as the upset of the Chicago Bears in 1947, which followed the equally surprising conquest of the Los Angeles Rams. Both were defeated 16 to 0.

The All-Stars have won five games and participated in two ties. The Cardinals' victory last year was the eighth for the National League champions. The Western Division of the league has dominated the series, the Bears alone have appeared six times. Philadelphia is the first Eastern Division team in the series since the Washington Redskins were defeated by the 1943 All-Stars, 27-7.

Charles "Bud" Wilkinson, of Oklahoma, head coach of the Stars, hopes he can generate some touchdowns from his split-T formation, with which Oklahoma won the Big Seven championship last year. In practice the collegians have demonstrated that passing has a definite spot in their strategy.

The collegians' strength stems from the key quarterback position. Jack Mitchell, Oklahoma's 1948 field general and ball handler, is thoroughly familiar with the offense. He will have help from Frank Tripucka, Notre Dame, and Norm Van Brocklin, Oregon. Since Mitchell played under Wilkinson at Oklahoma and is well versed in his system, he probably will play most of the time when the Stars have the ball.

Barney Poole, end from Mississippi State, will captain the All-Stars

Van Brocklin and Doll will share in the punting and Van Brocklin will do most of the passing.

The Eagles' attack is a two-punch wallop consisting of Steve Van Buren's devastating runs and Tommy Thompson's passing. The Stars feel that with Charles Bednarik, Pennsylvania, and Myrl Greathouse of Oklahoma backing up the line, they may be able to throw a halter around Van Buren.

The probable starting lineups:

COLLEGE ALL-STARS

LE—Barney Poole (Mississippi).
LT—Phil O'Reilly (Purdue).
LG—Marty Wendell (Notre Dame).
C—Charles Bednarik (Penn).
RG—William Fischer (Notre Dame).
RT—A. DeRogatis (Duke).
RE—Mel Sheehan (Missouri).
Q—Pete Elliott (Michigan).
LH—George Taliafero (Indiana).
RH—Jerry Williams (Washington State).
FB—Elwyn Rowan (Army).

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES

LE—Jack Ferrante (no school).
LT—Vic Sears (Oregon State).
LG—Cliff Patton (T. C. U.).
C—Viv Lindskog (Stanford).
RG—Frank Kilroy (Temple).
RT—Al Wisteri (Michigan).
RE—Pete Pihos (Indiana).
Q—Tommy Thompson (Tulsa).
LH—Steve Van Buren (L. S. U.).
RH—Bosh Pritchard (V. M. I.).
FB—Joe Muha (V. M. I.).

COACHES

All-Stars—Charles "Bud" Wilkinson, Oklahoma, head coach; assistants, Bobby Dodd, Georgia Tech; Bob Voigts, Northwestern; James Aiken, Oregon; George "Lefty" James, Cornell; Gomer Jones, Oklahoma; Ray Graves, Georgia Tech.
Eagles—Earle "Greasy" Neale, head coach; assistants, John S. Kellison, West Virginia Wesleyan; Larry Cabrelli, Colgate.

WOL Broadcasts Tonight's Grid Game

Radio Station WOL (1260) will carry a description of the Philadelphia Eagles-College All-Stars football game tonight starting at 9:30, Washington time. Harry Wismer will give the play-by-play. The game won't be televised here.

Detroit Recalls Hurler Hal White

Detroit, Aug. 11 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers today recalled Hal White from their Toledo farm club.

White has a 10-8 pitching record with the Mudhens this year. He was optioned to Toledo after the 1948 season, when he won two games and lost one with the Tigers. The 30-year-old righthander first joined the Tigers in 1942.

But Not Our Joe!

Court Score Card Shows Two DiMaggios 'Fanned'

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—They needed a scorecard in court circles here today.

In felony court this afternoon, Joe DiMaggio, a 22-year-old unemployed youth, was charged with felonious assault for striking a doctor with a pair of scissors and biting him on both wrists. He was committed to Bellevue for 10 days for observation.

Another Joe DiMaggio, a 50-year-old unemployed man, with a record of 12 convictions, appeared in police lineup this morning.

"Yes."

"I see you are first in the lineup today."

DiMaggio nodded.

"You entered a railroad car without permission. You were trying to steal a bag?"

"I was trying to pick up anything," DiMaggio replied.

"Well, you didn't score. Your batting average isn't so good."

"No, I got two strikes on me because of my record."

"This is your third strike," Phillips said.

In Magistrates Court the second DiMaggio was sentenced to 100 days in jail for disorderly conduct by Magistrate Doris Byrne.

T-H-E Joe DiMaggio, a Yankee baseball player of some renown, was in Boston with his teammates today for a game with the Boston Red Sox.

NOTHING STOPS SNEAD—It's the old story for Pro Golfer Sam Snead—the ball must go through. Yesterday on his second hole in the Tam O'Shanter World Championship tourney, he refused to let this towering tree get in his way. He slyly looks around tree to watch his ball (arrow) soar to within 6 feet of the cup. Sam sank the putt for a birdie on the par-five hole. The rest of his game wasn't brilliant, he ended up with a par 72. (See story, Page 26)

Puts the 'Score' Straight

Bones Has No 'Bone to Pick' With Feerick; 'We Understand Each Other,' He Writes

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Bones McKinney, crowd favorite with the Washington Caps for three seasons, yesterday took the trouble to deny rumors of dissension between himself and newly appointed Coach Bob Feerick.

Writing from his Raleigh, N. C., home, Bones stated, "Some people are under the impression that I have refused to play for the Caps because Bob was named coach. With your help, I'd like to put the "score" straight.

"I made a statement at the conclusion of last season that I was retiring. There was no reference made that any coach would have any bearing either way on my statement.

"I did say when Mr. Uline considered me for the coaching job it would be player-coach. Other than the preceding statement, I have not made known any change in my original decision to retire.

"As for Feerick, I have the highest regard for his ability as a player and knowledge of the game. I sincerely believe that he will do a good job as coach, in spite of the necessity to rebuild and win at the same time. There has never been the slightest bit of dissension between Bob and me and, I will venture to say, there will never be.

"We understand each other as friends and as professional basketball players.

"I read the recent article in The Washington Post on the newly-organized National Basketball Association. A few trips around that circuit and a man like Herman Hickman would look like me.

"With a 70-game schedule, I don't see why they just don't add 20 more and make it a year-round game.

"I'm sorry for you people with all that humid weather. Na-

"Hope you can help me clear up those rumors."

In announcing his retirement in April, old Bones said, "Frankly, the pace is getting too fast for me and I want to quit while I'm on top."

Recently, owner Mike Uline said he expects McKinney to forget his retirement plan and play for the Caps next season.

Uline was quite positive, saying, "Where else can McKinney pick up $9000 for five-months work?"

Nats Take On Bosox Tonight

Boston, Aug. 11.—Don't be too hasty in counting the Nats out of the pennant race.

Beginning tomorrow where they meet the Red Sox once in the afternoon and again at night they'll be right in the thick of it.

Their own title chances are deader than last Thanksgiving's turkey, but Joe Kuhel's gang could conceivably decide where the World Series will be played this fall.

From tomorrow until August 22, when they head West for the last time this season, the Nats will mingle with nothing but pennant conscious teams.

Six Games With Sox

They play the Red Sox six games in four days, shift over to New York for four games in three days and then come home for four more scuffles with the red-hot Bostonians.

Of course, both the league-leading Yankees and the third place Sox look forward to getting fat against the Nats. This doesn't bother the Nats in the slightest.

That one-game winning streak they own hasn't made 'em cocky, but on the other hand neither are they overawed over the impending battles, with the league giants.

The Nats like to recall the semi-final day of the 1948 season.

An Eventful Victory

They were in Boston, out of everything except their uniforms, and Ray Scarborough up and beat the Sox, 5-4.

That game cost Boston the pennant. It left the Sox in a deadlock with Cleveland for first place and the Indians won it and went on to win the world's series.

Scarborough will probably face the Bostonians in the evening part of tomorrow's two-games for two admissions program. Either Mickey Harris or Paul Calvert will work the other.

Ez Champion? Not In Virginia

Richmond, Va., Aug. 11 (AP).—The Virginia Boxing and Wrestling Commission voted today not to recognize Ezzard Charles as the world's heavyweight boxing champion.

Charles is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association, of which the Virginia commission is a member.

"Regardless of what the NBA does, Virginia refuses to recognize Charles," Joe Bauers, secretary of the VBWC, declared in announcing the vote.

Virginia thus became the second State to declare the heavyweight championship vacant. New York State, where Charles successfully defended his NBA title last night against Gus Lesnevich, does not recognize him as champion.

Bauers said today that the Charles-Joe Walcott fight, in which Charles gained the NBA title, was "a disgrace to boxing."

Just Call Him 'Shipwreck'

Lupica Sets World's Record Sitting on Flagpole 72 Days

CLEVELAND, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Charlie Lupica set a national flagpole sitting record today and promptly changed his name to "Shipwreck."

"The last two national champions called themselves 'Shipwreck' and right now I'm taking over both the title and the name. It's Charlie (Shipwreck) Lupica from now on," the new champ said.

Charlie ended his seventy-second day aloft at noon, beating the old record of 71 days, 23 hours and 35 minutes set by Milton (Shipwreck) Van Nolan of San Francisco.

Before Van Nolan it was Alvin (Shipwreck) Kelly, the most colorful of all sitters, who claimed the national title.

He was champion in 1930 and did it the had way by sitting on nothing but a 10-inch brake drum and a cushion atop his pole.

Lupica, who climbed on his perch atop his confectionery store May 31 on a bet that he would remain there until the Cleveland Indians were in first place in the American League, said he was far from finished despite breaking the old pole-sitting record.

"I came up here to stay until the Indians hit first place," he said. "And I'm gonna stay until they do or the baseball season ends. I'll come down then for sure."

Joe DiMag, Ted Homer; Mel Parnell Wins 17th

By Joe Kelley

Boston, Aug. 11 (AP).—Boston's Red Sox won the game they believed was a "must" to keep in the American League pennant fight today when they downed the leading New York Yankees, 7-6, before a cheering throng of 30,818.

The third-place Sox once again are within 5½ games of the New Yorkers.

Bobby Doerr, who had hit only a harmless double in this three-game series, lined a 3-0 pitch into center field to score Ted Williams from second with Boston's winning run in the sixth inning.

There were three home runs in the two-hour and 57-minute long contest.

Ted Hits 29th

Ted Williams lined a fierce drive into the Sox bull pen in right center in the first inning for the first Sox run. It was his twenty-ninth of the season and his first of three hits.

Joe DiMaggio poled a long high homer for three New York runs in the fourth. The clout was the Yankee Clipper's eleventh this season and the ball bounced off a light tower above the high wall and screen in left.

Birdie Tebbetts pasted his fifth of the campaign into the nets in the fourth to start a three-run Boston attack in that inning.

Jack Kramer started for Boston but didn't return after the fifth inning when some good fielding by Johnny Pesky enabled the right-hander to get out of the inning after facing only three batters.

Parnell entered the game at the start of the sixth and had a busy time in that session. He walked the first two batters and struck out the third.

DiMag, Bauer Fan in 9th

Gerry Coleman and Charlie Silvera then singled in succession for two runs. After pinch-hitting Charlie Keller fouled out, Parnell gave two more walks, forcing home the third run. Then he struck out Henrich to end the inning.

The Sox winning score came after the first two batters went out in the sixth. Williams grounded into center field, through a spot opened when Casey Stengel shifted Phil Rizzuto after Williams tried to slice the first pitch into left field. Vern Stephens drew a walk and Doerr then lined to center to score the winning run.

A's Beat Prisoners, Joost Turns Pitcher

Graterford, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP). Shortstop Eddie Joost tried his hand at pitching today as the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Graterford prison team in an exhibition game, 8 to 2.

He hurled the last one and a third innings, and didn't allow a hit. Taft Wright and Augie Galan featured the A's attack with home runs.

Feller Wins

Chisox Bow, 6-5, Indians 4½ Off Lead

Cleveland, Aug. 11 (AP). — The Cleveland Indians won their thirteenth out of 14 extra-inning games this season tonight, defeating the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 5, in the twelfth inning.

Second Baseman Cass Michaels of the White Sox let Johnny Berardino score from second base when he threw Mike Tresh's grounder wild to First Baseman Chuck Kress in a double play attempt.

The victory enabled Cleveland to cut New York's lead to 4½ games.

In gaining a full game on the league-leading New York Yankees, Manager Lou Boudreau used 20 players of his allotted 25.

Dodgers Take Lead, Beating Phillies, 10-7

Philadelphia, Aug. 11 (AP).—Pee Wee Reese's fourteenth home run, hit in the eighth inning with two on, gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 10 to 7 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and a clean sweep of the three-game series tonight.

The victory gave the Dodgers undisputed possession of first place with a half-game margin over the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

Dallas Owner Displays Temper After Team Loses

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 11 (AP).—Bill Rives, sports editor of the Dallas Morning News, said tonight Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler is investigating a display of temper by Dallas club owner Dick Burnett in the press box at Burnett field Thursday night, August 4.

In his column, Rives said:

"After the game, in which the Eagles had lost their third straight, Burnett came into the press box and dialed the telephone.

"When he did not get his number, he jerked out the telephone and heaved it from the press box. Then he announced he wanted no news about the game to get beyond the press box.

"One after another, he seized two Western Union teletype machines and a Western Union ticker machine and yanked them from their moorings."

Mailander Wins Again

Mailander defeated O'Donnell, 6-1, in the D. C. Major Recreation Girls Softball League last night. It was the winners' nineteenth victory in 21 games.

Ike Williams' Dodge Irks Dawson Pilot

The mercury officially hit 95.3 about 2:30 p. m. yesterday when Freddie Dawson, who meets Doug Ratford in Monday night's headliner at Griffith Stadium, was at the height of his workout at Turner's Arena, but that didn't compare to the boiling heat generated by his manager, Harry Rudolph.

Harry reached a quick boiling point over the beautiful dodge he claims Ike Williams is giving his lad.

While Dawson danced through four rounds of boxing and did a short bag-punching routine, Rudolph massed some pertinent facts to bolster his demand for a crack at William's lightweight championship.

Dawson has fought in 90 fights, lost only five.

Dawson drew with Williams in 1947 in a non-title and Ike thereafter decided he wanted no more of Freddie.

Dawson has not lost a fight in two years.

Decisions over Charlie Williams, Tommy Campbell, Gene Burton, Bobby Lee and Hank Barrows. Knockouts over Bernie Doucasen, Charlie Milan (broke latters' jaw in the tenth round at Turner's Arena) and Terry Gibson.

"Aren't those enough reasons for a shot at Williams?" asks Rudolph.

Dawson showed 200 fans a bit of his skill yesterday as he went through two rounds with Welterweight Holley Mims and Marshall Clayton, All-Army lightweight champion who recently turned pro.

Ratford will join Dawson in training at Turner's today. He will drill at 3 p. m., an hour later than Dawson. Boxing Commissioners Henie Miller, Tom Morgan and Clarence Talley will be on hand for a look at Monday night's opponents. The public is invited.

Mangrum Soars to 76, Snead Has 72

By Jerry Liska

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—As favorites faltered, hefty Clayton Heafner banged a six-under-par 66 for a one-stroke lead in the first 18-hole round of Tam O'Shanter's $35,200 carnival, the "world" championship of golf.

Heafner, a runner-up in the 1949 National Open, whipped around Tam's par 36, 36—72 in 33, 33 using 33 putts for his one-stroke margin over Henry Ransom and Johnny Palmer, who had 67's.

The day's biggest disappointment was Defending Champion Lloyd Mangrum's collapse for a whopping 76, four over par. The year's top money winner, Slammin' Sammy Snead, also was somewhat lack-luster with an even par 72, some 30 places behind Haefner.

Mangrum's woeful showing after his triumph in Tam's All-American which ended Tuesday put him in danger of missing the 32 top scorers and ties to be screened into Saturday's third round. Mangrum was 56 places behind with his 76 during the course of which he was anchored with a three-over-par seven on the 375-yard seventeenth hole.

Middlecoff Has 69

Four players were bracketed at 68, two strokes off the pace. In this quartet were Jim Ferrier, who fizzled a chance to take the lead when he failed to better par on the back nine after an opening 32; Ed Furgol, kink-armed veteran from Pontiac, Mich.; Jim Turnesa of the famed golfing family; and Dick Metz.

Another foursome was deadlocked at 69, including National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff; Chandler Harper, the consistent rapper from Portsmouth, Va.; Dandy Jim Demaret; and Willie Hunter.

The traffic was heavy at 70 with eight players notched there, while nine tied at 71.

Patty and Babe Tie

In Promoter George S. May's "world" sideshows, two veterans, Patty Berg and Babe Zaharias shot 74's to share he first round lead in the women's $1600 pro meet; Frank Kovack of Waukegan, Ill., paced the men amateurs with 70; and pretty Alice Bauer of Los Angeles topped the women amateurs with 76.

Heafner, shooting some of the most consistent golf of his career, never was over par in his 66 round.

Section Title Won by Marx

Marx Jewelers won the section one title of the National City Junior League, downing American Legion Post 139, 11-8, yesterday on the Ellipse. Ed Claxton doubled and tripled and drove in two runs to pace the winners.

Marx will meet the Washington Capitols Monday at 5 o'clock on the West Ellipse for the championship of both sections. The winner will represent Washington in the All-American Junior Baseball Championships late this month in Johnstown, Pa.

Oxford and Red Bank Events Major Lures For Washington's Boatmen Over Weekend

By Happy Walker

TWIN MAJOR regattas will lure Washington's boat racing enthusiasts to the road this weekend.

Walker

The Oxford Race Week on Chesapeake Bay and the Red Bank National Sweepstakes will draw almost all of the top seeded area sailing and power aces to these favored rendezvous.

Tred Avon Yacht Club at Oxford, Md., will stage their invitation Star, Dolphin, Thistle and Penguin class races, Saturday and Sunday, leading off with with a sail cruising race today from Baltimore Light to the Tred Avon Y. C.

On hand to compete for the highly prized trophies will be Frank P. Greenman, Dr. Walter Lawson, Frank and Gene Marquardt, Judge Prentice Eddrington, Ed Hoyt and Carlton Skinner, all veterans of this down to the sea sport, sailing.

For the bang and go power moguls, the North Shrewsbury River at Red Bank, N. J., will see the seventeenth annual running of the National Sweepstakes Regatta, widely known as one of the East's titular speed boat classics. Saturday and Sunday are crowded with some 30 events in both outboard and inboard endurance tests, including the Red Bank Gold Cup and National Sweepstakes, both of national significance.

Carrying the colors from the Washington area and shooting for the silverware in the outboard field against some stiff competition will be Hudson Moses, Ike Hale, Washington's iron man of outboards; Jimmy Baden, Dean Wooster, Jim Broaddus, and a B hydro newcomer, Dick Bauer.

The inboard contingent will be headed by Joe Palmer, erstwhile restauranteur and his Tommy Boy, who will attempt to repeat his last years Red Bank 135-cubic-inch hydro class win; also planning to be on hand are John Wege, Aubrey Thacker, John Kerley, Earle Hildebrand and Roy Bagley.

Washington speedsters will attempt to lift the Mexican Republic Trophy, the Col. Garcia Valseca plaque, a highly coveted goodwill award.

STAY AT HOME boating weekenders will not be entirely without a waterfront boating attraction. The Georgetown Channell, off Washington Canoe Club, will be the scene of a series of 10 matched shell races starting at 1:30 p. m. Coming up from Richmond are the highly touted Virginia Boating Club crews to compete with crews from the Old Dominion Boat Club and Potomac Boat Clubs.

The National champion W. and L High School crew, sans its captain and coxswain, will be on hand. Jim Wright, Cornell crewman, will star in the classes to include eight oars, quads and gigs.

Captain Charlie Butts and George Hernon, President's Cup reviewing chairman, will be on hand to officiate.

AN INTERESTING and well illustrated 24-page booklet, "Know Boating Pleasures" is being offered without cost by the Owens Yacht Co. of Baltimore. The publication has information valuable to expert yachtsmen as well as to novices.

How to select a boat, probable maintenance charges and how to spend an enjoyable vacation afloat are part of the contents. A call to Larry Jerman, Walnut 7000 will get your free copy.

Aussies Meet Italy Today

Rye, Aug. 11 (AP).—In a surprise move, Australia's Davis Cup team nominated Billy Sidwell instead of John Bromwich to play singles against Italy in the inter-zone finals starting tomorrow at the Westchester Country Club.

Sidwell will meet Gianni Cucelli, the Italian champion, in tomorrow's opening match. Frank Sedgman, young Australian champion, faces Marcello Del Bello in the second.

The Australians tentatively named Bromwich and Sedgman to play doubles against Cucelli and Del Bello on Saturday. It is permissible to switch doubles nominees up to within 24 hours of play.

The Aussies offered no official explanation of Bromwich's absence from singles. It was believed, however, that they felt the terrific heat might be too much for the veteran.

Dr. Evans Wins At Congressional

Dr. W. J. Evans registered a 79 to win the low gross trophy in the Dr. Michael DeVito Memorial Tournament held yesterday at Congressional Country Club. W. N. Schoenfelder won low net honors with an 85—14 for a 71.

All profits realized will go to the District of Columbia Heart Association.

D. C. Firemen Bow, 11 to 7, To Heurich

Heurich Brewers, Washington Post Industrial League champs, blasted the D. C. Firemen, 11-7, yesterday on South Ellipse in a City Series game.

The firemen, Recreation League titlists, held a 7-4 lead in the fifth but Heurich came up with a seven-run splurge. Highlight of the inning was Ralph Cooper's triple with two on.

Brother Love came in to quell the Smoke-Eaters' bats in the top half of the fifth and shut them out the rest of the way with three hits.

Today at 4:30 on the South Ellipse, Headquarters Marines meet the Police Department nine in another City Series contest.

Kelly, Clese Lead Attack

Steuart Team Beats Central, 12-1, in Johnson's 14-Yr. Class

Rosedale Playground's L. P. Steuart team romped over Takoma Playground's Central Fuel, 12-1, yesterday on the East Ellipse in the first game of a best-two-of-three series for the 14-and-under championship in the A to F sections of the Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball League.

Buddy Kelly sparked the Rosedale attack with three hits in three times at bat, three runs scored and four batted in. Nick Clese also had a big day for Rosedale, getting three for three and scoring twice.

The two teams clash again today in both age groups, the 12-and-unders playing at 11 o'clock and the 14-year-olds battling it out at 4 in the afternoon. Both games will be at Griffith Stadium.

Sections G to K Play at Stadium

Play gets underway today in the G to K sections of the Walter Johnson Memorial Baseball League with Langston meeting Hayes in the 12-and-under group and Bundy clashing with Langston in the 14-and-under class at Griffith Stadium.

Don Wills has been selected to hurl for Langston in the 12-and-under game. Wills pitched a no-hitter last Friday night to win the championship for Langston against Kelly Miller in the American Association. He received his first schooling on pitching from Chic Pieretti when Chic was pitching for the Washington Senators. Bobby Pickett will oppose him.

In the 14-and-under game, Sammy Hawkins, a protege of the Nats' Dick Welteroth, will fling for Langston against Bud Kay for Bundy.

The Hayes-Langston game starts at 9 a. m. and Langston squares off with Bundy at two in the afternoon.

Misplay by Baumholtz Helps Bucs

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—Pittsburgh whipped the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 2, to capture the rubber tilt of their three-game series today. The Pirates capitalized on a fielding miscue by Frank Baumholtz in the eighth for the decisive run.

With Walt Dubiel and Bill Werle in a 1-1 deadlock, Stan Rojek opened the eighth with a single. He was forced by Tom Saffell. Johnny Hopp followed with a hit to right that should have been a routine single. However, Baumholtz charged the ball and it got past him for a triple, scoring Saffell. Hopp counted a moment later on Ralph Kiner's fly.

NBA Decides Its Divisions

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—The newly merged National Basketball Association today was broken down into two divisions—the National and American.

The Nation's 18 top pro teams which are members of the new loop were split up further into eastern and western sections of each division.

An outstanding ruckus was settled amicably. This was over college stars who had been drafted by teams in both old leagues—the National Basketball League and the Basketball Association of America. The winners of the draft rights in such cases were settled by a flip of a coin.

The National division will include the following: Eastern section—Syracuse, Indianapolis, Sheboygan and Anderson. Western—Tri-Cities (Moline, Davenport and Rock Island), Denver, Waterloo and Milwaukee.

The American division will include: Eastern — Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. Western — Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Rochester and Fort Wayne.

Playoffs will be arranged between winners of each section of the National and the American divisions, and betwen the winners of the two divisions.

The league probably will open play about November 1 and end about March 15, officials said.

He Shoots 2 Aces On 1 Round—But 2d Doesn't Count

Lafayette, La., Aug. 11 (AP).—It happens to most golfers only once in a lifetime.

But yesterday it happened twice to Frank Clark, a member of the Louisiana State University golf team. Only the second time it didn't count.

He shot his first ace on the 130-yard number 3 hole. When he reached the 210-yard thirteenth hole, Clark knocked his tee shot out of bounds. Shooting two, he teed off again. Up went the ball and down it came to roll in the cup.

But it didn't count because his previous shot gave him two strokes.

Pancho Gains Semifinals

Newport, R. I., Aug. 11 (AP).—National singles champion Richard Gonzales battled to the semifinals of the Casino's Thirtieth Invitation Grass Courts Tennis Tournament today.

By ousting fifth seeded Herb Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., 4—6, 7—5, 6—2, 6—1, top seeded Gonzales joined San Francisco's Arthur Larsen in the second last round.

Larsen upset Earl Cochell of San Francisco, 7—5, 6—3, 8—6.

Pre-tournament form was given another jolt today when Jack Tuero of New Orleans and Arnold Saul of San Diego, Calif., unseeded in doubles play, eliminated the fourth ranked tandem of Bill Talbert and Sid Schwartz, of New York, 3—6, 6—1, 12—12.

Clowns Meet Grays Tonight

The Indianapolis Clowns, augmented by their famous quartet of Fun-Makers, will face the Washington Homestead Grays in a night contest at Griffith Stadium tonight at 8:30.

This will mark the first appearance of the Clowns in Washington this season and also the initial nocturnal contest of the Grays this season.

Mt. Rainier, Southeast Win in Softball Tourney

The Southeast Businessmen and Mount Rainier both scored 2-0 victories in the first round of the D. C. Amateur Softball Association Tournament last night at Greenbelt, Md.

Tonight at 7:30, Galliher and Highly meets Scogna Tailors and Kavakos plays Harding Hardware at 9:15 in the second round of play. Both games are at Greenbelt.

Mrs. Costello Wins

Mrs. Paul Costello shot an 86 to win low gross honors in Ladies' Day play yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club. Mrs. George Hunter and Mrs. Harold Winston tied for low net prize. Mrs. Hunter had 88—18 for a 70 and Mrs. Winston scored a 96—26—70.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE Colony Restaurant is one of the city's most comfortable places to dine. In the spacious dining room, classical bas relief status of mythological personalities are complete with lyres and pipes. A dusty pink and creme background is reflected by large mirrors which also point up the huge vases of flowers.

Patrons are free of the "to-see-and-be-seen tinge," enjoy the good food and add to the pleasant atmosphere. Prices are not out of line with what the customer gets.

Alex Stuart, owner, is a personable New Yorker who comes from a family of restaurateurs. Watching his new business with a practiced eye, he's decided something unique in entertainment is called for in the cocktail lounge and has promised to produce it by September.

IF YOU see the Shoreham Terrace people, including Barnee Breeskin, going around with their heads buried in Variety, they can be forgiven. This terse magazine of show business, usually parsimonious with praise, has just given the Terrace and its maestro a big hand for the atmosphere of the place and the Mutual show that is aired from it Saturday nights.

Barnee usually has a sprinkling of Senators, Cabinet members and other celebs taking part in his fluffy half hour of entertainment, a fact of which Variety takes due note.

Last Saturday's guest was funster Geo. E. Allen, who told about his recent fishing trip to Wisconsin with General Eisenhower.

Bonus Rule Repeal Voted

Chicago, Aug. 11 (AP).—The major-minor league baseball executive council today unanimously voted to repeal the much discussed bonus rule.

Walter Mulbry, secretary of the council, said the proposal for repeal would be submitted to the 16 major league clubs and 400-odd minor league clubs for mail voting immediately. If a three-quarters vote favors repeal the rule will be removed from the major-minor agreement.

Mulbry said it probably would be several weeks before the result of the balloting is complete.

The present bonus players will carry that tag until January 1, 1953, Mulbry said. He added that major league officials, as well as minor leaguers, were generally opposed to the rule which allows bonuses of $6000 for the major leagues, and Class Triple A and Double AA leagues. The scale is sliding in the minor leagues.

House Group Approves Bill for $113 Pay Hike For Classified Workers

The House Civil Service Committee yesterday gave its approval to the Murray bill to overhaul the Classification Act and to raise the salaries of the 885,000 Federal and District employes under it by $113.57 a year. The vote was unanimous. The measure was recommended by a subcommittee headed by Chairman Tom Murray (D., Tenn.).

At the same time, the committee approved an amendment to the postal pay bill to give supervisors credit toward longevity promotions for past services, increases of $100 upon completion of 13, 18, and 25 years of service.

On the Senate side, the Civil Service Committee debated but postponed action on the bill by Majority Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) to raise the salaries of legislative employes a flat 5 per cent and to boost the pay of Capitol Hill officials. The measure is sure to be approved.

Except for a few technical changes, the Murray bill was approved as written by the subcommittee. It compares with the Long bill before the Senate, which would boost the pay of classified workers an average of $125 a year. A breakdown and comparison of the Murray and Long bills appeared here Tuesday.

The Long bill is on the Senate calendar. It has been tentatively decided to call it up for action next week. The Murray bill will be placed on the House calendar. However, Chairman Murray will go before the Rules Committee to urge it to clear the postal and classified pay bills for House action. High points of the Murray bill are:

It brings under the Classification Act upward of 25,000 employes who are not now covered by it, such as those in RFC, Export-Import Bank, Displaced Persons Commission, Philippine War Damage, Agriculture Credit Corporation, Customs, Clerks, and Immigration inspectors.

Exempts the 3860 clerical-mechanical employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from the Classification Act and gives the Treasury wage board authority to fix their salaries on a prevailing rate basis;

Merges the 31 CAF, P, and SP grades into a single general schedule of 18 grades with a salary range from $2186 to $15,000. The Crafts, Protective and Custodial schedule is continued within the Classification Act. It would have 10 grades, a minimum of $1510 for messenger boys and girls, and $3120 for adult workers; the ceiling is $4900.

AGRICULTURE: Robert W. Herder has been appointed Assistant Administrator for Management of the Production and Marketing Administration, a new post. Gerald E. Tichenor is his assistant. Herder will have direct supervision over budget, personnel, auditing, space, compliance, and investigations. It's the first time management has been raised to such a high level in the big agency. P&MA Administrator Ralph Trigg ordered it.

Henry Iler has been indorsed for chairman of the Civil Service Commission by AFGE's Adjutant General's Office. He has potent support for the post . . . The bill to raise the travel allowance for Federal workers from $6 to a maximum of $9 a day has been law for six weeks, but the ultra-conservative Interstate Commerce Commission is still sticking to the inadequate $6 allowance . . . About 5 per cent of the civilian employes at nearby Fort Belvoir, Va., are being laid off. Similar cutbacks are in store for other nearby Army posts . . . Margaret M. Mooney, a correspondence clerk, retires today from the Veterans' Administration after 30 years of service . . . Samuel H. Sackman is the first first full-time organizer for CIO's right-wing Government Workers Union.

Office of the Housing Expediter may have to make a small layoff in its staff both here and in the field . . . Delegate Farrington of Hawaii has a bill in the House to extend veterans preference to civilian employes who served in a combat zone from December 7, 1941, to September 2, 1945 . . . The Patent Office has requested Congress to enlarge its board of patent appeals from 9 to 12 members . . . The reorganization plan that would transfer the Public Roads Administration to the Commerce Department is facing stiff opposition in both the Senate and the House. PRA is now a part of General Services Administration . . . There are 11,000 more Federal workers in the Executive agencies here than there were a year ago

Court Backs U. S. Right To Use Label 'Subversive'

2-1 Ruling Upholds Denial of Motion Brought by Joint Anti-Fascist Group

The Government's program of labeling certain organizations as "subversive" was upheld by the United States Court of Appeals for the District in a 2-1 opinion.

Judge Henry W. Edgerton dissented from the majority opinion, which was written by Judge James M. Proctor and concurred in by Judge Bennett Champ Clark.

The ruling upheld a District Court denial of a motion brought by the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee to force the Justice Department to drop the committee's name from its roll of "subversive" groups.

The committee, 11 of whose members were given fines and jail sentences in July, 1947, on charges of contempt of Congress, had held that the executive order which authorizes the "subversive" rolls is unconstitutional.

The committee also complained that the Government's action caused the group to suffer loss of reputation, "business and patronage," including contributions, hampered efforts to gain new members and inflicted "economic injury" upon its members.

But, wrote Proctor, "the executive order exhibits a proper effort by the President to carry out the provisions of Section 9A (a Hatch Act provision which prescribes the dismissal of any Federal employe who belongs to any political party or organization advocating overthrow of "our constitutional form of government").

"It is an exercise of his power as head of the executive branch . . . to protect the Civil Service from disloyal and subversive elements," the majority opinion continued, adding, "We do not doubt validity of the Attorney General's act. Had the President performed the task himself, his acts could not have been challenged legally."

The court pointed out that the Attorney General in compiling the list of allegedly subversive groups was merely acting in behalf of the President.

Analyzing the question of damage allegedly suffered by the committee and its members, the opinion held:

". . . Nothing in the Hatch Act or the loyalty program deprives the committee or its members of any property rights. Freedom of speech and assembly is denied no one. Freedom of thought and belief is not impaired. Anyone is free to join the committee and give it his support and encouragement. Everyone has a constitutional right to do these things but no one has a constitutional right to be a Government employe."

But, objected Edgerton, "the facts have not been tried and we know nothing about them."

The jurist held that the committee may, in truth, be simply a charitable organization, as it has claimed, and he said:

"However indefinite the word 'subversive' may be, it is more or less synonymous with 'disloyal.' It is highly defamatory. No common meaning of the term fits the appellant (the committee) if the appellant's aims and purposes are what it says they are. In other words, if the complaint is true the appellant is not subversive. Whatever the actual facts may ultimately prove to be it must be assumed for purposes of this appeal that appellee's (Justice Department) ruling is not only damaging but contrary to fact."

The suit named the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee as appellant and Tom C. Clark, Attorney General of the United States et al., as appellees.

D. C. Small Loan Rules Await Young's Return

The District's long-awaited regulations on the small loan business yesterday were placed on the shelf until Commissioner John Russell Young returns from his vacation.

Young left on a two-week vacation August 1, but his office indicated this may be extended.

Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday announced no final action will be taken on the regulations until Young returns since he was present at previous hearings on the matter. Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, is overseas and is not expected to return until October.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray submitted a brief prepared by William R. Lichtenberg, attorney for the Washington Association of Finance Companies, opposing the regulations. Gray drafted the regulations.

Falls Church Chamber Issues Tug-of-War Defy

The Falls Church Chamber of Commerce yesterday challenged the Arlington Chamber of Commerce to a tug-of-war to be staged during the Falls Church Festival planned for August 18 through 20 opposite the Falls Church High School. The letter was signed by Frank H. Malice, president of the Falls Church Chamber of Commerce.

100 Wrecking Laborers Win 1-Day Strike

About 100 AFL laborers went on a one-day strike yesterday against two wrecking contractors here and won a wage increase of 10 cents an hour, as well as other benefits.

The laborers will be back at work this morning on projects of the Ace and General Wrecking companies, Henry Thomas, president of Laborers' Local 74, said.

The brief strike delayed work at the Senate Office Building, according to a spokesman for the Ace Wrecking Co., who said the walkout was a complete surprise.

Union spokesmen said however, the action had been planned for some time, as the wrecking contractors had been "dickering around" since the laborers' strike against the Master Builders' Association had resulted in a 10-cent increase.

The new contract, which is for two years, provides for $1.45 an hour in wages, time-and-a-half for overtime, double pay for Saturday and Sunday work, and a differential adding 12½ cents an hour to the pay of "barmen," or expert wreckers.

The previous contract had expired in March. Union spokesmen said there was no strike against a third wrecking contractor, Arrow Wrecking Co., because a similar agreement had been reached earlier with that firm.

Robbins Named Vice President At American U.

Professor James J. Robbins, 45, faculty member of the School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs at American University since 1941, has been elected vice president of the university, President Paul F. Douglass announced yesterday.

Dr. Robbins

After receiving a B. A. degree from the University of California at Los Angeles, an M. A. from Harvard, and a Ph.D. from Princeton, Dr. Robbins taught at Tufts College, Harvard, Western Reserve, Princeton, and West Virginia Universities.

An expert on Sweden, Dr. Robbins published a volume on "The Government of Labor Relations in Sweden" and from 1945-1949 served in the Foreign Service Reserve as Public Affairs Officer and First Secretary of the United States Embassy in Stockholm.

Friendship With Detective Leads Man to Admit Crimes

Boyhood friendship with a Newark (N. J.) detective brought about a confession here yesterday by a former convict that he had participated in two payroll holdups and a $72,000 safe robbery in that city.

As a result, an FBI charge of crossing a State line to evade prosecution was dropped against John Cyril Krafa, alias Krafako, and he was arrested by Washington police on a fugitive warrant.

Before U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence he waived extradition and left the city with Detective Daniel Scurese of Newark, the boyhood friend.

Krafa was arrested a week ago by FBI agents on the yacht Tech, anchored off Maine ave. sw. He was living there, the agents said. Scurese came here to seek removal of Krafa.

Washington Detective Sergts. Tom Hardie and James Dunn, of the robbery squad aided Scurese. The Washington officers said Scurese, on the basis of the boyhood association, persuaded Krafa to confess and waive extradition.

Newark police said Krafa was ringleader of a holdup gang which netted $83,000 in a series of robberies in that city and north New Jersey. Included were a $9000 payroll holdup of the Newark Umbrella Frame Co. last March; $2000 robbery of a supermarket in February, and the safe burglary of $72,000 in securities at the summer home of an East Orange, N. J., corporation official, in January.

Newark police last night made public a record on Krafa which included a dozen arrests, and two felony convictions since 1935.

Krafa told officers here yesterday:

"Truman was responsible for my downfall. I bet $4000 on Dewey and I had to get the money somehow."

Trade School Unit Seeks Parley in GI Training Case

Representatives of the Washington Trade Schools Association yesterday requested a conference with District Commissioner Guy Mason to answer charges by critics of the veterans' training program.

Milton Gould, association president, said the group was anxious to obtain specific complaints so they may investigate and prepare replies.

The Commissioners recently appointed a citizens' committee to investigate the charges after the Apprenticeship Council cited such complaints. The committee has not yet met.

Boy in Arson Case Put in State School

A 15-year-old boy who set fire to his uncle's house and burned down his store after an argument about the youth's wages has been temporarily committed to the Maryland Training School for Boys in Loch Raven, Md.

Juvenile Court Judge Alfred D. Noyes said the committment was to permit observation of the boy. The arson took place last month on MacArthur blvd. near Great Falls when the boy claimed his uncle promised him $8 to do some digging, but paid him only $4.

Navy Gun Factory Machinist Hangs Self in Cell

William M. Williams, 52, a Navy Gun Factory machinist yesterday hanged himself in a cell at the Eleventh Precinct station shortly after his arrest on a charge of destroying private property.

He was found hanging from a rope made of his shirt and socks.

According to homicide squad detectives, the man was arrested on a warrant sworn by his common-law wife, Mrs. Catherine W. Lambert, with whom he lived at 1625 R st. se., after he started smashing house furnishings in a fit of rage.

Mrs. Lambert told police Williams had been angered at her refusal to let him enter the house late Saturday night. The woman was prostrated and under the care of a physician following news of Williams' death. A certificate of suicide was issued by Deputy Coroner Christopher Murphy.

Man Held for Jury On Gambling Charges

Charles T. Harrison, 27, of 516 55th st. ne., yesterday was orderd held for grand jury action on charges of operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence continued bond at $1500.

Identical charges were dismissed by Lawrence against Leon Ables, 19, of 5316 Bell pl. ne. Both men were arrested by vice squad police July 20 in a poolroom.

Ohio's Name Goes on D. C. Street Today

After years of frustration, Buckeye State boosters will at last enjoy consummation of their persistent efforts to restore the glorious name of Ohio to the thoroughfares of the Nation's Capital.

At 9:30 a. m. today, behind the Lincoln Memorial, Riverside dr., will be rechristened Ohio dr.

Again and again Ohio failed to rename such thoroughfares as Bladensburg rd., Concord ave., the western end of M st. and Canal rd., as well as Eastern ave.

Recently the National Capital Park and Planning Commission approved renaming Riverside dr. and Interior Secretary Krug indorsed the action.

Ohio, once upon a time did have an avenue here named after it—one of the city's bawdier thoroughfares. It vanished when the Federal Triangle was developed.

The ceremony today should mean much to Representative Jenkins (R., Ohio). He has persistently battled for an Ohio st. here.

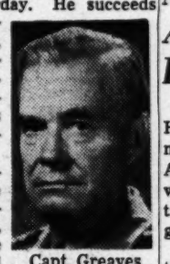
Captain Greaves Commands Naval Hospital Here

Capt. Frederick C. Greaves is the new commander of the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, it was announced yesterday. He succeeds Capt. Bartholomew W. Hogan, who was temporarily in command and resumes duties as executive officer.



Capt. Greaves

Captain Greaves, a graduate of the University of Iowa, entered the naval medical services in 1923. He served as an Army private in the first World War. He has previously served tours as director of laboratories and executive officer of the Naval Hospital.

Before assuming his present assignment, Captain Greaves was fleet medical officer, Pacific Fleet, with headquarters at Pearl Harbor.

Maryland Law On Deity Oath Held Not Valid

Judge Rules Man Who Says He Is Pantheist Must Be Given Council Seat

An old Maryland law that public officials must swear their belief in the Christian religion or a hereafter was declared unconstitutional yesterday by Prince Georges County Circuit Court Judge Charles C. Marbury.

The judge further ruled it is questionable whether the Maryland Legislature has the right to force a public official to declare his belief in the existence of God.

As a result, J. Milton Stanford, member-elect of the Brentwood (Md.) Town Council, who says he is a Pantheist, must be given his seat on the council, the judge said. Stanford initiated court action when the town council refused to seat him because of his beliefs.

Authority Superseded

The jurist, in a seven-page opinion, found that the Maryland State Constitution of 1867 superseded the authority of an 1854 law requiring a public official to swear to his belief in the Christian religion, or in a future state of rewards and punishment.

He said the 1867 constitution prescribes an oath to be taken by public officials upon entering office. There is no mention in the oath either of God or religion.

In addition, Article 37 of the constitution's declaration of rights provides:

"That no religious test ought ever to be required as a qualification for any office of profit or trust in this State, other than a declaration of belief in the existence of God; nor shall the Legislature prescribe any other oath of office than the oath prescribed by this constitution."

Of Article 37, Judge Marbury wrote:

"There remains open the question of whether the Legislature now has the power . . . to enact a statute providing that one required to take an official oath of office shall declare belief in the existence of God."

'Inconsistency' Noted

He later noted, in talking with reporters, that the phrase—"other than a declaration of belief in the existence of God" and the clause which follows it in Article 37 "seem inconsistent."

He stated in his opinion that the Legislature has never attempted requiring a public official to swear to his belief in God, "if it has the power to do so."

Town Councilman Stanford was asked to take the oath prescribed by the constitution. To that oath, which was drafted by Vance V. Vaughan, attorney for the town council, was appended this sentence:

"I believe in the Christian religion."

Stanford has said he was willing to take the oath up to that point, but that he could not swear to a belief in Christianity. He said he felt he could conscientiously swear to a belief in God, because, he said Pantheists believe in God in a broad sense.

The opinion concluded by stating Stanford is entitled to be seated as a town councilman upon taking the official oath of office as found in the constitution.

Man Faces Jury Action in Shotgun Death of Wife

John Richard Clements, Rogers Heights (Md.) man charged with manslaughter in the shotgun death August 1 of his wife, yesterday was released in $1500 bond for action of the Prince Georges County grand jury.

Clements, 42, is accused of fatally injuring his wife, Mrs. Hazel Clements, 34, at their home, 5318 Gallatin st. Police said he reported that the gun was accidentally discharged when he attempted to insert a clip in it.

Detective Earl J. Huber testified yesterday at a preliminary hearing in Hyattsville Police Court that Clements, a mechanic, had told him he didn't believe his wife would have been shot if he hadn't been drinking. Clements did not testify.

Boy Won't Lose Arm in Accident

Rennie Jene Byrd, jr., 7, Riverdale Heights, Md., boy who severed the main artery of his left arm Wednesday in an accident at a playmate's home, will not lose the arm, physicians reported yesterday.

The boy, who lives at 6221 60th pl., slipped while putting his arm through the broken window of a basement door in trying to open it. Doctors at Leland Memorial Hospital at first thought amputation might be necessary.

Maryland Gets 8 Acres

President Truman yesterday signed a bill giving the State of Maryland eight acres of land in Greenbelt, Md., as a site for a National Guard armory.

D. C. Heads Hold Indecisive Slums Parley

The District government's approach to the long festering problem of slum clearance was discussed yesterday, but no final decisions will be made until another meeting is held next Tuesday.

The Commissioners met yesterday with John Nolen, jr., planning director, National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Mark Lansburgh, chairman, Redevelopment Land Agency, and John Ihlder, director, National Capital Housing Authority.

The conference was called after Senators John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) and Ralph E. Flanders (R., Vt.) pointedly asked the city heads to declare what they plan to do in the next six years about the problem and whether they expect to avail themselves of funds under the new National Housing Act.

Nolen and Ihlder will meet with Assistant Corporation Counsel Irving Bryan, legislative draftsman, today to prepare a proposed reply to the Senators. This will be considered and acted on at Tuesday's meeting of the Commissioners.

Meanwhile, the Commissioners received an opinion from Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West explaining how they may lift a freeze on public and private building at Marshall Heights. This area was designated as the pioneer project of the Redevelopment Land Agency, but Congress failed to appropriate funds to execute the plans.

Instead, a House Appropriations Subcommittee urged that the Commissioners aid the area by providing "essential services . . . such as the grading of streets and the installation of water and sewer and other improvements in the same manner that other areas have been developed."

It also urged lifting the freeze order in effect several years. The Redevelopment Act requires the Commissioners to halt issuance of building permits for public or private jobs in the area as soon as it is designated for redevelopment.

Yesterday West declared the freeze may be lifted by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission withdrawing their approval of the project, then holding a public hearing to obtain views of affected residents in the area and finally by the Commissioners recalling approval.

In Poetry Award to Pound

Library Fellows Deny 'Fascist Sympathies'

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

The Fellows of the Library of Congress in American Letters yesterday replied to criticism of their award of a poetry prize to Ezra Pound.

The Fellows, all prominent writers, denied any "sympathy for fascism" or "irresponsible estheticism" in their choice of Pound's "Pisan Cantos" for the $1000 first annual "Bollinger Prize in Poetry" last February.

They said that if it was "the wish of the American people that its professional workers express their opinions honestly," they had not "acted improperly."

The award to Pound—charged with making treasonable broadcasts from Italy during World War II, but never tried because of his confinement in St. Elizabeths Hospital as a mental patient—has been criticized in articles and editorials beginning in June in the Saturday Review of Literature.

Representative Javits (R., N. Y.) has called for an investigation.

Senator Green (D., R. I.), chairman of the Joint Committee on the Library of Congress, yesterday said the committee will consider the possibility of an inquiry when it meets in the near future.

The Fellows' reply came in the form of a memorandum with three "annexes"—totaling 21 pages—to Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans, and was released by the library. The Fellows serve the library as unpaint consultants, and the prize money is donated by a private foundation with no control over choice of a winner.

Replying to what they described as "insinuations" by poet Robert Hillyer in the Saturday Review of Literature, they said:

"No sympathy for fascism, no condoning of anti-Semitism exists among them. To assume that they may or must have such sympathies is to deny them the capacity to perceive literary distinction in a work which expresses and springs from attitudes and opinions they do not share."

The statement called attention to favorable reviews given the "Pisan Cantos." In defense of the Fellows own professional qualifications it was pointed out that one, T. S. Eliot, had received the Nobel Prize in Literature, and that six had received Pulitzer Prizes.

Poet Leonie Adams, secretary to the Fellows and the library's consultant in English poetry, disclosed that in a secret mail ballot 10 votes gave first place to Pound's book, and Theodore Spencer, who had died a few weeks before, had made known his preference for it. Two other voters gave first place to another, unnamed book, and one fellow, Paul Green, did not vote.

'Shanghaied' Sailor Gets Trial Tuesday

The sailor, S/1c James Patrick Ryan, 24, of Hawthorne, N. J., was declared an unauthorized absentee by the Navy on July 4, 1947, at San Remo, Italy, while serving aboard the destroyer Harlan R. Dickson. He reported to the American consul at Canton, China, last March.

His story, bizarre as it seems, will be attested to by fellow Americans who served with him in the legion, Ryan's attorney, Walter Moorman, Bethesda, said yesterday.

According to the Associated Press, a French Defense Ministry spokesman has said Ryan joined the Legion voluntarily and fled before the French could release him upon learning of his Navy status).

According to Moorman, Ryan made the acquaintance of a French girl and a man while on a party at San Remo. He awoke the next morning in a small room, nauseated from the effects of drugs, to find his money gone and the destroyer departed for Marseilles.

The sailor then, according to his story, hitchhiked to Nice, France, where his vessel was slated to dock temporarily, in hope of catching up with it.

But French authorities arrested him as a German spy, pressed him into the service of the Foreign Legion after torturing him by making him kneel on nail-studded broomsticks.

He was transferred to Africa, according to his attorney, and efforts to communicate with American authorities were foiled by his superior officers.

3 Prince Georges Draft Units Cut

Draft boards in Prince Georges County will go on a part-time basis next week as a result of a result of a slash in Selective Service funds.

Board 55, in the County Service Building at Hyattsville, will be open from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. Monday and Tuesday of each week.

Boards 56 and 57, in the Pollack Building at Upper Marlboro will be open from 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. Thursday and Fridays.

5 Policemen Named Privates, Class 1

The five were John A. Barrett, 26, no relation of Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett; William C. Trussell, 21; Anthony P. Cassidy, 31; Thomas J. Horrigan, 21, and Joseph R. Lynn, 22. The appointments were made on the recommendation of Acting Superintendent Clarence Talley. Major Barret is on vacation.

Rigoletto's Evil Unfolds At 'Gate

By Paul Hume

All the evil plotting of Verdi's 'Rigoletto' spilled out on the Watergate stage last night as one of opera's nastiest stories unfolded.

Poor Gilda was abducted from the shelter of her home and her father's noisy plan for vengeance backfired, accounting for her unhappy death by stabbing in act four.

Eva Likova was a newcomer to opera stages, singing Gilda. She was duetted with Richard Tucker from the Metropolitan Opera where things like Rigoletto have been going on since 1883. Likova is a lyric rather than a coloratura soprano. The added weight in her voice made Gilda seem much real than the flimsy tone of the average singer in the part. Her soft work is beautiful, and she can muster enough tone for real excitement in the climaxes. She was particularly lovely in her duets with Rigoletto, and in the famous quartet.

She should not try for the very high notes, none of which Verdi wrote in his version of the opera. They strain her unnecessarily. Tucker is a good, solid Duke. If his singing lacks subtlety, so did the Duke's conduct—perhaps that justifies the rather monotonous color of the voice.

It is not that Tucker does not sound well, he just always sounds the same. Where is the loud and soft, the light and shade?

Stefan Ballarini was clearing his throat in much of the opera as if he had the makings of a cold. In any event, most of the title role taxed him more than he could stand. He does not chill the observer with the part but it is hard to take the whole thing seriously anyway.

Sparafucile, the pleasant assassin of the piece, was sung by John Lawler, whose voice is fine for music except at the top. Lorraine Calcagno and Deanna De Sanctos were Maddalena and Giovanna, playing the parts well in both cases.

William Jordan made the bit of Monterone stand out in voice and acting alike. And as on the previous night, the orchestra was in better than average shape, with Carlo Moresco leading a well-paced performance.

The San Carlo has improved its offerings steadily in its eight nights here. Two offerings remain on their schedule: Carmen, tonight, and Butterfly, Saturday.

Thieves Loot Safe, Then Clean Up

Arlington police yesterday were on the lookout for two tidy thieves, who cleaned out the safe of the Bell Drug Store, 2615 Columbia Pike, Arlington, then cleaned up the mess they'd made.

Missing from a safe behind the drug counter was about $1400, according to Detectives John E. Wise and George Coppage. Hinges of the safe were sawed off, but all debris was swept into a neat pile. A rear door, opening onto an alley, was discovered unlocked, the detectives said.

Progress Report—Well, If It Isn't Almost Time to Move In . . .

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

THE BERKSHIRE IS BEGUN—Although construction of the new 6½-million-dollar Berkshire Apartments is in the foundation stages, completion is expected in less than a year. The vast project, which will have three wings, stretches .2 of a mile along Massachusetts ave. nw., south from Ward Circle. Work was started last July. The Berkshire will have 800 apartment units, 2518 rooms. The builder is Standard Construction Co. and the owning corporation is 4201 Massachusetts Avenue, Inc., headed by William Magazine. The buildings in left background are part of huge Navy Communications Station at the former Mt. Vernon Seminary. Area ((A), near intersection of Macomb st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., was filled in by Berkshire builders with earth from excavation. It starts what will sometime be the beginning of the Arizona Freeway

Smoke Fells Two Firemen As Arlington Home Burns

Two Arlington County firemen were overcome by smoke early yesterday, while fighting a blaze which made a charred ruin of the top floor of a frame house at 1416 N. Quinn st., Arlington.

The injured firemen, Ellwood Foltz of Company 2, and Frank Higgins, sr., of Company 4, were treated and released from Arlington Hospital.

Campbell, whose wife and 9-month-old baby were visiting in Pennsylvania, leaped from his bedroom window to a sloping porch roof, where his cries roused the first-floor occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Luther B. Koone. They fled to safety with their two children, Jeffrey, 28 months, and Jeannette, 9 months.

Arlington Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel said the fire started in a living room chair.

School Board Head Defends Its Methods

Arlington School Board Chairman Barnard Joy yesterday released answers to 2 of 16 questions fired at the board by the Arlington Fact Finders.

The Fact Finders, who have accused the board of "failing to add one permanent classroom to the school system in 19 months," delivered the list of questions earlier this week.

The Fact Finders asked Joy to "define the phrase, 'responsive to the will of the people,'" included in its 1947 platform.

Joy said the board had carried out its pledge by holding its meetings in halls large enough to accommodate an audience, and by working closely with the county P-TA and other civic groups.

The Fact Finders also asked him to "clarify" the board's claim that it has encouraged democratic procedures in school administration. They asked particularly whether "it is considered a democratic procedure to adjourn an open meeting to executive session . . . then call back an open meeting after public and press are gone?"

Joy replied that 'in principle the board is opposed to executive sessions. It holds them only when the matter to be discussed appears to be one on which premature publicity would result in payment of higher prices for needed property, or when publicity might bring unjust reflection upon the ability of members of the school staff."

Joy acknowledged that calling the board back to open meeting after an executive session is "not democratic, but when board members are together, they cannot wait to call back press and public before taking necessary actions."

Kansas State Alumni Elect Schruben Head

Luke M. Schruben, 4606 De Russey Parkway, Chevy Chase, has been elected president of the Kansas State College Alumni Association of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers elected are Dewey Z. McCormick, first vice president; Mrs. Pearl M. Shaffer, second vice president; Ralph W. Sherman, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Herbert W. Ford, corresponding secretary.

Kensington Man Hangs Self in Home

After apparently failing in two attempts at suicide, William R. Vander Veer, 34, was found hanged in his isolated home at 3016 Jennings rd., Kensington, Md., late yesterday afternoon.

A certificate of suicide from asphixia by hanging was issued by Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County Medical Examiner. Dr. Broschart added, however, that Vander Veer had previously cut his wrists and then turned on some gas jets.

Vander Veer was found slumped on the floor, his head and shoulders against a double decker bed in an upstairs children's bedroom. A childen's pajama cord was about his neck and looped over the upper bunk.

Montgomery County Police at Silver Spring had sent a car to the Vander Veer residence about 8 p. m. Wednesday following a report of domestic difficulty, after which, it was theorized, the family had left the house.

Odenton Tavern Blaze Damage Put at $10,000

An estimated $10,000 worth of damage was caused late Wednesday night when a blaze destroyed Mike's Place, a tavern in Odenton, Md., owned by James Hodges of Odenton.

Fire-fighting apparatus from Odenton, Ferndale, Herald Harbor, Jessup and Fort Meade fought the blaze. No one was injured, Maryland State police reported.

Fire Chief Charles Eckman said the structure, a two-story wooden home with additions for the tavern, was almost burned down, together with the equipment.

He said the fire apparently started in an electric motor which ran a refrigerator compressor. Hodges was out of town when the fire broke out.

29 Get Diplomas At Alexandria School Tonight

Twenty-nine graduates will receive diplomas from the George Washington High School tonight at 8:30 o'clock at commencement exercises climaxing the Alexandria school's annual summer session.

The graduating class includes 10 girls and 19 boys, five of them veterans who have returned to complete their high school education after serving in the armed forces, according to Principal Irving Lindsey. Diplomas will be presented by Theodore R. Sinclair, assistant superintendent of schools, while the graduation talk will be made by Thomas Moncure, assistant commonwealth's attorney for the city and a graduate of the high school.

Attending the summer session were 183 high school students and 85 elementary pupils. Nongraduates will receive report cards at 9:30 a. m. aturday.

L. C. Topley Dies; Funeral Set Saturday

L. Cleveland Topley, 65, retired foreman at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, died yesterday at his home, 1608 N. Randolph st., Arlington.

He had been ill for a week with a heart condition.

Mr. Topley, a native of Cherrydale, Va., retired three years ago after some 45 years service at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, first as a pressman, then for 15 years as foreman in the offset printing section.

For more than 30 years he had been a member of Cherrydale Lodge, No. 42, A. F. A. M.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Topley; a son, Cleveland Topley; a brother, William D. Toplep; six sisters, Mrs. Amos Livingston, Mrs. Walter E. Croson; Mrs. Nelson Parker, all of Arlington, and Mrs. Fred E. Andrews, of McVeytown, Pa.

The funeral will be held at 3 p. m. Saturday at his home. Burial will be at National Memorial Park Cemetery, Lee hw., near Falls Church. Masonic services will be held at the grave.

Wheaton Chamber Elects Oyster New President

Thomas Oyster was elected president of the Wheaton Chamber of Commerce at a meeting Wednesday night at the Glenmont School, Wheaton, Md.

Other officers chosen were Hudson F. M. Eldridge, vice president; Robert G. Pendleton, secretary; J. Milton Smith, treasurer; and Fred W. Jones, sergeant-at-arms. John R. Pendleton and Joseph R. Brechner were chosen directors for two years, and John M. Smith and C. C. Sisson, directors for one year.

The Chamber voted indorsement of the application of the Washington Suburban Lines for increased bus service to the Wheaton area, subject to further screening of the company's plan.

Virginia Infant With Rare Blood Disease Is 'Fine'

The infant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Hawes of Fairfax Park, Burke, Va., developed erythroblastosis shortly after birth.

Though this disease is frequent when the parents have conflicting Rh factors in their blood, it has been noted in fewer than 20 cases when the parents' blood is O and A type, respectively, as in this case. Treatment for the disease is quick transfusion with compatible blood.

Salisbury 'Blue Baby' Leaves Johns Hopkins

Baltimore, Aug. 11 (AP).—Five-year-old Kay Chatham of Salisbury has been dismissed from Johns 'Hopkins Hospital "very much improved" after a "blue baby" operation, hospital authorities said today.

The operation, to correct a malformation of the heart, was performed July 23 by Dr. Alfred Blalock. The child is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Chatham.

Heart Attack Proves Fatal To O'Connell

John H. O'Connell, Washington native and prominent Legionnaire, died of a heart attack on the West Coast Monday.

Mr. O'Connell, whose home was at 2023 2nd st. ne., was stricken at Okonogan, Wash., while traveling to Los Angeles, Calif., for a visit with his sister, Mrs. Doris Healey.

He had spent 32 years in Government service and last month retired as chief of the Social Security Board's New York City office. He had worked in New York for the past two years but maintained his home in Washington.

Mr. O'Connell attended Central High School and first started with the Government as a mail carrier in Detroit 33 years ago.

After a few months there, he was assigned as a clerk in the Railway Mail Service in Washington, and worked in that agency until 1938.

He was graduated from the Columbus University School of Law in 1932 and after leaving the Railway Mail Service, became a Government lawyer with the Social Security Board. From 1943 until he took over the New York office, Mr. O'Connell was chief of the Board's audit section in Baltimore.

In 1934, he served as commander of the Vincent B. Costello Post, American Legion, and in 1935 was Grand Chef de Gare of the 40 and 8 Society. In 1935 also, he received the Watson B. Miller trophy from his post for outstanding service.

He served with the District National Guard on the Mexican border and in France with the 110th Field Artillery, Twenty-ninth Division, in World War I.

Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Mary D. O'Connell, and a daughter, Mary Ann O'Connell, both of the home address. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery Tuesday but details of the funeral have not yet been aranged.

T. J. Tracy, Safety Aide For D. C., Dies

Thomas J. Tracy, sr., 48, industrial safety engineer for the District of Columbia and president of Local No. 2, AFL Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union, died of a heart attack Wednesday night.

Mr. Tracy was stricken at the home of his father-in-law, Manly J. Fox, 1214 N. Hartford st., Arlington.

A native of Hartford, Conn., Mr. Tracy attended New York University and became a marble fitter. He came to Washington 15 years ago to work on internal marble setting in Government buildings. He has been with the D. C. Government for the past five years.

A fourth-degree member of the Washington General Assembly, Knights of Columbus, and the Edward Douglass White Council, K. of C., in Arlington, Mr. Tracy lived at 1813 N. Rhodes st., Arlington.

He was also a past president of the Holy Name Society of St. Charles Catholic Church, 3333 N. Washington blvd., Arlington.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary Fox Tracy, and a son, Thomas J. Tracy, jr.

Mother Asks Aid in Finding Missing Son, 35

Mrs. Lulu Leonard Brown, of 908 New York ave. nw., yesterday asked police and public aid in locating her son, Fred Washington Leonard, a patient at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Roanoke, Va., who wandered away from Mrs. Brown's home about 9 a. m. Wednesday.

Leonard

Mrs. Brown described her son as white, 35, 5 feet, 9 inches tall; sandy-haired, with blue-gray, eyes; weight, about 150 pounds; with a small scar under his left eye and a scar from an old gunshot wound on his right forearm.

Mrs. Brown said her son, on leave from the hospital, could remember his name but not his address. When he left the house he was wearing gray wash trousers, a tan sports shirt, a brown leather belt with her name and address stamped on it, brown open-work sandals and white socks with his name stamped on them, and had $1.50 in cash and an inexpensive silver watch with gold chain.

Geographic River Surveyors Near End of Trip

Holtwood, Pa., Aug. 11 (AP).—The five canoeists surveying the Susquehanna River for the National Geographic Society were within one day's paddle of Chesapeake Bay and the end of their 444-mile trip tonight.

The quintet portaged their two 18-foot aluminum canoes around the Holtwood Dam, inspected the local hydroelectric plant, and then set off for Conowingo—and another dam.

W. R. Metz, Jr., Dies; Wounded Navy Veteran

Walter Richard Metz jr., 42, who was seriously wounded during World War II, died yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital.

Mr. Metz

A Navy Storekeeper second class, he was caught while serving in the Mediterranean area in December 1943, and crushed in the vacuum which followed a bomb explosion, according to his family.

He had spent most of the time since then in hospitals, and had entered Mount Alto, where he was kept in an oxygen tent, last January, his family said.

Born in Washington, Mr. Metz attended public schools here and was graduated from the former Briarley Prep School in Poolesville, Md. He was a salesman for many years until he entered the Navy in September, 1942.

He was named honor man of his company at the United States Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill., in November, 1942. He received a medical discharge several months after he was injured.

Mr. Metz was a member of Washington Post No. 2194, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and of the Disabled American Veterans, Ernie Pyle Chapter, in Silver Spring.

He is survived by his parents, Maj. W. R. Metz, retired Army officer, and Mrs. Metz, of 17 Crescent pl., Takoma Park, Md.; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Robin Currin, of Arlington, Va.; a sister, Mrs. Eleanor M. Kennedy, of Washington, and a brother, Capt. John J. Metz, of Seattle, Wash.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 1 p. m. at Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Howard Rites Monday In Arlington

Private services for Col. Deane C. Howard, 79, retired Army Medical Corps officer who for several years was superintendent at Gargeld Memorial Hospital, will be held Monday at 10:30 a. m. in Arlington Cemetery.

Colonel Howard, a native of Colrain, Mass., died Tuesday after a brief illness. He lived at 1016 16th st. nw.

Colonel Howard received his medical degree in 1893 from Columbian Medical School, now George Washington University, and then studied at the Army Medical School after receiving an Army commission.

During his Army career, he served in Cuba, Panama, the Philippines and various posts in this country as a surgeon in the Medical Corps.

He was chief health officer for the Panama Canal Zone in 1916. During World War I, he was chief of sanitation and preventive medicine in the Surgeon General's office. He retired from the Army in 1922.

From 1924 to 1930 he was superintendent at Garfield. He was a member of the Army and Navy Club here, a fellow in the American Medical Association and belonged to the Association of Military Surgeons and the American College of Surgeons.

His wife, Mrs. Mercy Baldwin Howard, and a son, Capt. Donald C. Howard, jr., died several years ago. Survivors include two nieces, Mrs. Helen F. Simpson, Springfield, Mass., and Mrs. Elizabeth Fallon, Freeport, Tex., and a nephew, Marcus Fiske, Freeport; three grandnephews and grandnieces.

Miss Emma T. Hahm

Miss Emma T. Hahm, until recently the owner of the Allies Inn, 1703 New York ave. nw., passed away yesterday at her home, Bonnie Brae, 6036 Oregon ave. nw. Mrs. Hahm was one of the founders of the Allies Inn during World War I.

She was a past president and member of the Zonta Club, a member of the Business and Professional Women's Club, the Chevy Chase Garden Club, the Washington Restaurant Association and the First Church of Christ, Scientist of Chevy Chase, Md.

Col. Harry Gantz

Rapid City, S. Dak., Aug. 11 (AP).—Col. Harry Gantz, a member of the original United States Air Corps, died yesterday in Australia while on a world tour.

Gantz was No. 14 on the list of Army fliers when the first Air Corps was organized. He was a close friend of the then Lieut. H. H. (Hap) Arnold. After combat flying in France during World War I, Gantz returned as a major but resigned his commission to take care of private interests in California.

During World War II, Gantz was called back to duty by General Arnold and served on the Air Force staff in Washington.

Dressing Light, Of Course

For Summertime Salads Word Is: 'Keep It Crisp'

By Lucia Brown

WHAT THE well-dressed salad will wear these summer days is almost as vital a question as what the well-dressed person will wear.

Both should be lightly clad for hot weather. A lot of oily or soupy dressing can ruin even the crispest lettuce leaf. And with salads practically a staple item of diet in the "dog days," there's no point in ruining them.

MISS BROWN

Make dressings full of flavor and snap, and apply them with a light and sparing hand just before serving. The salad and dressing should get together as soon as they come from the refrigerator, then go straight to the table.

The simplest salad dressing you can make (and kids love it) is to slightly sweeten fresh lemon juice with brown sugar and add a bit of salt. Serve on finely shredded lettuce. This is a good one for people on a fat-free diet, too. Here are some other suggestions, all for use with any basic French dressing recipe:

FOR FRESH FRUIT SALADS: Add 2 tablespoons honey, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind to 1 cup French dressing. Combine well and chill.

FOR TOMATOES AND LETTUCE: Add 2 tablespoons chopped chives or 2 tablespoons finely chopped spinach to 1 cup French dressing.

FOR WINE LOVERS: Add 2 tablespoons honey and ¼ cup sherry to 1 cup French dressing. Combine well with rotary beater. Serve on greens with fruit—orange slices, avocado wedges, and onion slices, for instance.

SPECIAL MEXICAN DRESSING: (Just a little bit hot!) To ¾ cup French dressing, and 1 sieved yolk of a hardcooked egg, 1½ tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon chili powder, and 1 finely chopped green onion or scallion. Jab a toothpick through a garlic clove and drop into the dressing. Remove the garlic just before serving. This dressing is best made several hours in advance and, at the last minute, poured over a bowl of shredded lettuce or other greens.

FISHY FACTS: The Blue Fish is king of 'em all this week. More of these are being caught now than for several years past, says Fish and Wildlife Service, and they are both plentiful and reasonable on the Washington market. They have a firm, white flesh, not too dry, and are delicious either broiled or baked. You can buy them whole or steaked.

The prices on soft shell crabs are a little lower this week, if you've been hesitating about buying this luxury item. Crab meat is still plentiful and reasonable. Fresh shrimp is scarce but there's a fairly good supply of frozen shrimp. Prices are high, though.

COOKBOOK CORNER: Out in Chicago, a covey of home economists decided to get together and pool their knowledge of really delicious desserts. The result is a 135-page recipe book that will sharpen your sweet tooth just with the reading. Called "Favorite Desserts of Chicago Home Economists," it is issued by the Home Economics in Business group there.

ORANGE CREAM SHERBET

2 tablespoons cold water
½ cup sugar
½ cup hot water
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/3 cup coffee cream
1 egg white
Dash of salt

SOAK GELATIN in cold water 5 minutes. Dissolve sugar in hot water and boil 5 minutes. Add grated rind and softened gelatin to sirup and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Strain and add sirup to fruit juices. Chill.

Add fruit mixture slowly to cream. Pour into freezing tray. Freeze until firm with cold control at coldest setting. Add salt to egg white and beat until stiff. Remove mixture to chilled bowl and beat with chilled beater until light and creamy. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white to which salt has been added. Return to tray and freeze until firm. This will make six servings.

Do You Like Old-Fashioned Home-Made Ice Cream? Here's the Recipe

Lots of people still have them and enjoy old-fashioned home-made ice cream, despite the thousands of gallons of commercially frozen cream and refrigerator tray treats eaten yearly.

Here are tips on making:

First, scald and air the freezer-can to be sure it has no stale odor or flavor.

It is not necessary to cook a mixture of cream, milk, sugar, fruit juice, crushed fruit or other flavoring before freezing. But for the best flavor and texture the mix should be thoroughly chilled in the refrigerator for a few hours or overnight before freezing.

Never fill the freezer can more than two-thirds full because air, whipped in during freezing, expands the mixture and space must be left for it.

Crush ice by placing in a strong canvas bag and pounding with a mallet until pieces are fine and even. Use about six pounds of crushed ice to one pound of rock salt or table salt. To start the ice melting and thus hasten the freezing, add one pint of cold water to the ice and salt.

Turn the freezer crank slowly at first to prevent churning the cream before it starts to freeze. As the crank turns harder, turn it faster in order to whip in as much air as possible during the freezing and thus make a smoother product.

About 15 or 20 minutes of turning the crank is all that should be necessary to freeze the contents of a two-quart freezer. When the ice cream is frozen, wipe the top of the can and open carefully so that no trace of salt gets in. Remove the dasher, scrape the mixture down from the sides of the can. Plug the hole in the cover with a cork and replace the cover on the can. Then drain off water from the outer part of the freezer and pack with more ice and salt. For this packing use about one part salt to eight parts of crushed ice by weight and pack around and over the can. Place a heavy piece of cloth or several thicknesses of newspaper over the top of the freezer for insulation and let the ice cream stand at least two hours before serving, for best texture and flavor.

For a rich vanilla ice cream, the dairy specialists of the Department of Agriculture give the following recipe for a two-quart freezer—enough for seven to ten servings: Ingredients: 4 cups whipping cream, 1 cup whole milk, 1 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons vanilla, ¼ teaspoon salt. To make: Simply mix, chill and freeze.

About Value Of Old Records

I have a number of old records. How can I find out if any of these are valuable? M. M.

I have been told by a record dealer that the only real way to find out whether old records have value is to advertise them and, in that way, see if there are persons who are interested in buying them. So, why not try an advertisement in The Washington Post?

Also, you might find interested buyers through a record collector exchange. Here are the names of two: Record Collector's Exchange, 56th st. at Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y. and Theodore Fillipi, 1107 30th ave., Seattle 22, Washington.

Would you publish a recipe for Mustard Pickles?

An Appreciative Reader.

MUSTARD PICKLES

2 cups whole small cucumbers
2 cups sliced cucumbers
2 cups string beans, broken in ½-inch pieces
3 green peppers, chopped
3 red peppers, chopped
2 cups quartered small green tomatoes
2 cups cauliflower flowerets

Cover the above ingredients with a brine (½ cup salt to 1 quart of water) and let stand overnight. Drain, rinse in fresh water, drain again and cover with mixture of equal parts of vinegar and water. Let stand 1 hour, heat to boiling, drain, add mustard dressing and simmer 5 minutes. Fill hot sterilized jars to overflowing and seal at once. Mustard dressing: Mix 4 tablespoons flour, 1 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon tumeric, 3 tablespoons dry mustard and ½ tablespoon celery seed. Slowly add 1 quart vinegar and cook 5 minutes. Yield: 6 pints.

Note: When cooking the mustard dressing place the pan onto an asbestos pad to avoid burning. Stir frequently. This recipe makes a fairly sour pickle—if you like it sweeter add more sugar, up to four cups for a very sweet pickle.

When G-Girls Talk About FBI They May Be Plotting a Raise

HEREAFTER when G-Girls speak of the FBI they won't mean the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

They'll have reference to something that to them, at least, is of more immediate interest than spies and counterspies. What they will have in mind, precisely, is the F-B-I of Job Grooming, Fashion-Beauty-Improvement.

This newest twist to Washington's system of initialed enterprises is the name of a course in good grooming designed for Government girls which opens Monday night in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium and will be concluded Friday. Presented by the Virginia Farrell Organization of Detroit, the series of classes is sponsored by the Federal Recreation Committee.

For this first week the classes will be open only to women employes of the Agriculture and Defense departments, but plans are under way for subsequent series in other departments of the Government.

The course is a streamlined version of a Virginia Farrell 10-session course which has been selling to girls in private industry in Detroit for $150. Our G-Girls are being offered the same thing—in two lessons—for $3.

Tickets now on sale in the two departments permit girls to attend two of the sessions, one on fashion, slated for Monday and Tuesday; and one on grooming, to take place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Two sessions will be held daily at 5:30 and 7:30 p. m.

Here is the program, as described by Miss Farrell, a fair-haired beauty expert who for the past 16 years has been telling Detroit business girls how to improve their appearances:

The first feature, offered on Monday and Tuesday is called My Day and Washington Buyline. It combines a fashion revue, the do's and don'ts of job etiquette, wardrobe planning and budgeting, accessory tricks, and is designed for stage presentation with models and skits.

The second session is the Grooming Clinic, taking place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. During these each girl in the audience receives individual help with her own wardrobe problems; suggestions as to her best colors; training in figure control, correct posture and walking; proper techniques in selecting and applying make-up and modern trends in easily-cared-for hair-styles.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Sister-in-Law's Visit Starting Three Months Ago, Has Turned Into Permanent Stay, Hostess Fears; Nervous Strain Is Severe; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am desperately in need of a confidante who will give me fair-minded counsel, and you are the person I have chosen.

About eight months ago I was in the hospital for a second major operation and since returning home I haven't been able to regain my strength and have been under a doctor's care. Added to this, about three months ago my husband's sister Carrie came here for a visit, and her visit seems to have turned into a permanent stay.

We have a medium-size apartment with two bedrooms, one for my husband and myself, the other for our son, 16; and to get to his room you have to go through ours. To accommodate Carrie, we gave his room to her and bought an extra bed for our room, where he was to sleep during her visit.

She Loses 10 Pounds; Doctor Is Concerned

THIS arrangement allows no privacy at all, especially with Carrie going through our room. Also the situation causes more work for me, and I can't get the rest the doctor orders; and I am developing complications that the doctor doesn't like, due to the constant strain. I have lost 10 pounds in the last month, which isn't good, the doctor says.

Carrie seems blind to the inconvenience she is causing, so what can we do? Her mother lives here in this city and has room to spare, so should I ask Carrie to go stay with her? Or should I keep trying to bear this burden? Or do you think that my husband (her brother) should tell her, in a nice way, to terminate the visit? Please answer soon. R. B.

Recalls the Fable About Brash Camel

DEAR R. B.: Well, really! I've heard the fable about the camel who gets his nose under the tent and then by degrees takes over the place, crowding rightful tenants to the wall; and plainly the moral of the tale is, protect yourself against that sort of thing. Carrie's behavior seems a case in point.

I daresay she is a lonely creature, like the fabled camel, seeking to worm her way into the midst of human companionship and settle down. But after all, she doesn't belong in your back bedroom as a fixture, if it means that your husband, your teen-age son and your ailing self are robbed of decent privacy—obliged to sleep three in a room that she must use as a passageway.

Carrie must indeed be blind to everything but her own need to outwit loneliness, or she wouldn't have stayed more than a week in the "mixed company" dormitory set-up you describe. And inasmuch as her mother has house-room to spare in the same city, there is positively no valid excuse for her camping on your premises any longer; and she certainly should be firmly invited to end this "visit" and go stay there, if no other doors are open.

Arrangement Is Bad for Adolescent Boy

HEAVEN knows your medical condition urgently entitles you to immediate relief from her taxing presence; but aside from that, your son is getting a raw deal too. It is frightfully inconsiderate of his sensibilities, at his age, to bunk him in this crazy-house arrangement when it isn't strictly necessary.

Thus the diplomatic, factual, unanswerable argument is give Carrie, and also your husband (if he needs persuasion), in getting her out, is to say that with a boy in the family, you just haven't got decent accommodations for her on any permanent basis—because of course your son can't go on sharing your bedroom indefinitely; anybody ought to know that.

If husband or auntie asks, "Why not?" reply with spirit that you hope you don't have to teach adults the facts of life. And if somebody suggests turning the parlor into a bedroom, put your foot down at once and say flatly "No,"—and then stick to your main theme that it's time for Carrie to go. M. H.

TOBÉ SAYS— Fur Trim Flattering

I, for one, am very glad to see fur-trimmed coats back again, for no winter coat fashion was ever more flattering to women.

As a whole, fur collars on the new coats are short-haired furs like Persian lamb, the various kinds and colors of mink, beaver, squirrel, muskrat—and for the young and gay—spotted furs like leopard and ocelot. There are some fluffy foxes and lynx on the smart new casual coats.

and no wonder! That new blend—3-times-hand-selected-for-flavor—makes the new Chase & Sanborn mighty sweet breakfast music... begins your morning in a friendly key!

It makes "Early Morning Angels"

With this new coffee flavor you get a quicker "lift"...a better start on the day

Agreed, any good coffee gives you a lift. But take a coffee that really "sings" with flavor—that fills the cup with more than just liquid—and see how much faster you'll get going every day. With the first rich sip that passes your lips, your spirits will quicken, you'll feel better all over.

Flavor that can make you feel like this should have a special name. And it has! Selecciones! (Pronounce it seleck-see-o-nays, the way the Spanish folk on the Latin American coffee plantations do.)

Selecciones has to do with the way flavor coffees in Chase & Sanborn are selected. Since these are the coffees blended in to produce the delightfully light yet winey Chase & Sanborn flavor, they get particular attention.

HAND-SELECTED from pedigreed coffee trees that grow in the shade . . . where coffee berries grow plump and richest in flavor.

HAND-SELECTED for perfect ripeness . . . only the flavorful, deep-red berries are picked—individually, from each tree.

HAND-SELECTED before and after the curing process that develops flavor.

If you haven't yet savored this new Chase & Sanborn, why not get acquainted soon! Not only is the new Selecciones flavor a morning eye-opener; it'll open to you a completely new experience in coffee enjoyment.

You'll get double your money back if you don't agree it's the best coffee ever. Just send the unused portion to Standard Brands Inc., 595 Madison Ave., New York 22, N. Y.

ONE of the gayest features of 4-H Club week at the University of Maryland is the tribal meeting. Maxine Moffett (extreme right), a Shawnee, arrives at the afternoon get-together where challenges will be formulated for the evening campfire

AT HER home in Massey, Md., Maxine Moffett has her own 2-year-old Holstein. She, of course, was interested in the University of Maryland's Holstein calf. Maxine is attending the annual 4-H Club week at the University

Member Maxine Moffet Learns

There's Fun, Work, Too, For Md. 4-H Clubbers

By Nicha Soure

THIS IS THE WEEK that most Maryland 4-H members have been looking forward to all year.

And Maxine Moffett, like the 1000 other boys and girls attending the twenty-seventh annual 4-H Club Week at the University of Maryland, finds that although there are quite a few classes to attend, there is a lot of fun, too.

Sure, there are morning sessions where the girls get courses in everything from home management and furnishings to fashion and beauty. But in the afternoon there are "tribe meetings" and recreation periods, not to mention the campfires and group singing at night.

After the "work" is done in the morning, Maxine gathers with the other members of the Shawnee tribe to plan some competition at which they can excel at the campfire meeting in the evening.

Maxine, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Moffett of Massey, Md., had been active in 4-H work for the past four years, and has attended four annual meetings at the University of Maryland.

The pretty dark-lashed, blue-eyed girl says she "always wants to live in the country." "I'm not the outdoor type," she hastens to add, "but I love sewing, cooking and housekeeping." In her own words, she would love to be "the perfect hostess."

"IT LOOKS like an accordion," wailed Maxine as she looked at her formal after taking it out of the suitcase. Here she presses it to its rightful frothiness

THIS red and white polka dot dress caught Maxine's fancy as she looked over the blue ribbon dresses on exhibit at the University of Maryland. Although she didn't enter a clothing article in this year's exhibit, Maxine plans to make it one of her projects for next year's 4-H Club week

Sen. Kefauver Urges Killing Basing Bill

By The Associated Press

The so-called basing point bill should be killed, Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn). said yesterday.

"This bill creates new opportunities for monopolistic pricing," he said, "and it creates such confusion in doing so that it may be years before Congress learns just how far it has gone in legalizing monopolistic practices."

The legislation, passed by both Senate and House but in different form, would allow business firms to absorb freight costs in setting their prices provided there was no collusion with competitors.

Kefauver said in a Senate speech that the measure "is a dangerous bill because it confuses the law on unfair methods of competition."

Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), one of the leading advocates of the basing point bill, questioned Kefauver's contention that the bill would interfere with prosecution under antitrust laws or weaken them.

All Injured In Gas Blast Recovering

The 7-year-old girl who was hospitalized because of burns received in Wednesday's gas explosion at 7th and F sts. nw. was discharged from Emergency Hospital yesterday, and the three other hospitalized victims were reported in good condition.

Meanwhile, employes of the Washington Gas Light Co. made permanent repairs to the cracked 3-inch gas pipe whose leakage resulted in the blast, set off by an acetylene torch being used to repair a streetcar track about 15 feet from the crack.

Northbound and eastbound traffic through the intersection was shut off by police as the workmen repaired the pipe. Traffic was resumed fully at 6 p. m.

Howard B. Noyes, vice president and general manager of the gas company, said the crack in the pipe could have been caused by vibration from heavy traffic or by the settling of the ground because of underground construction in the area.

The injured girl was Margaret Jewell of 726 N. Abingdon st., Arlington, whose mother and two sisters received minor burns ni the explosion.

The other victims recovering at Emergency Hospital are Miss Laura Blanche Gregory, 56, of 439 Peabody st. nw., and Mrs. Lila Ruddle, 28, of 4608 Louis ave., Silver Spring. Mrs. Dora Pfau, 24, of 3237 Terrace dr. se., is recovering at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

ECA Clears 3 Nations in Metal Deals

By The Associated Press

Marshall Plan investigators have cleared three European countries of intentional wrongdoing in deals that sent heavy purchases of aluminum and lead scrap to American buyers.

This is disclosed in an unreleased Economic Cooperation Administration final report on charges made last winter against Great Britain, Belgium and Holland.

Howard Bruce, then deputy ECA director, at that time said the countries were selling in this country supplies of the then-scarce scrap metals. At the same time, he said, ECA was financing shipments of virgin metals abroad as vital to Europen recovery.

All three nations immediately denied the statement. Bruce, however, cited Commerce Department figures to show that aluminum and lead imports by the United States had zoomed tenfold since the start of Marshall Plan aid. He went on to explain:

"I do not consider that this constitutes a breach of faith. Rather, this means that the Economic Cooperation Administration had better inquire into whether we are shipping too much metal abroad."

Ruml Certain Of U. S. Future

New York, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—Beardsley Ruml, author of the "pay-as-you-go" tax plan, today said this Nation will not go broke in the next few years, but that some people will.

Writing in Colliers, Ruml gave these answers to the question: "Are we going broke?"

Ruml pointed out that last year and the year before, the most prosperous years this country ever has known, some citizens went broke.

"This year and next year," he said, "more of us, perhaps many more of us, will go broke individually than in the years just past. Because, in the first place, there are more of us. But, more important, customers are back in the saddle where they belong, and they are again making distinctions between horses jackasses and mules."

Ruml said the Nation would not suffer a depression as it did in 1907, 1921 and 1933 because of basic economic changes.

"No," he said, "too many basic changes have taken place in our economic system to permit the Nation to go broke again—unless there is war, or exhaustion of our natural resources. We must keep these two possibilities constantly in mind and guard against them.

$132 Billion Is Consumer Fund Total

By the United Press

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that the funds consumers have available for "all kinds of goods and services" rose two billion dollars in 1948 to a record 132 billion dollars.

Intimating that there is no reason for consumer demand to fall off, the board said liquid assets in the United States have expanded steadily for nearly a decade to bring the gains since Pearl Harbor to 87 billion dollars.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that the annual rate of personal income—another indication of the money people have for all types of purchases—amounted to $215,500,000,000 in June, compared with $212,900,000,000 in the preceding month.

The Federal Reserve Board's statistics were compiled as the fourth part of a 1949 survey on consumer finances. The board said the record volume of liquid consumer assets at the beginning of this year was "available to at least as many consumers as ever before."

But the board added a note of caution. It found that a "growing segment of the population" has been unable to accumulate any assets whatever and that this group may have to fall back on credit if it wishes to buy.

Transfer of Bureaus Approved in House

By the United Press

The House yesterday in effect approved President Truman's reorganization plan to transfer the Federal employment and jobless pay bureaus to the Labor Department.

It rejected by voice vote a resolution by Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.) to disapprove the transfer on grounds the Labor Department is a "special pleader for the cause of labor." The two bureaus are now in the Federal Security Agency. The plan will become law unless one house vetoes it within 60 days.

OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, District of Columbia: Whereas, on the 3rd day of August, 1949, the United States filed a libel in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, in District Court Case No. 3218 against 33 cases, more or less, each containing 10 five-pound bags and 66 cases, more or less, each containing 25 two-pound bags of an article labeled in part: (bag) "Indian Head Water Ground White Corn Meal," and whereas by virtue of process in due form of law, to me directed, I have seized and taken into my possession, to wit: 16 cases and 8 bags each containing 10 five-pound bags and 32 cases each containing 25 two-pound bags of an article labeled in part: (bag) "Indian Head Water Ground White Corn Meal." I hereby give notice to all persons claiming the said described above, or knowing or having anything to say why the same should not be condemned and forfeited, that they appear and assert said claim in the cause on or before the date returnable AUGUST 26TH, 1949, in the U. S. District Court, City of Washington, D. C., at 10:00 A. M. W. BRUCE MATTHEWS, U. S. Marshal. Aug.12

'Stand By to Pick Up the Pieces'

"That's what parents should do stand by to pick up the pieces."

I was leading a discussion of youngsters in Ogden, Utah, when one of the boys made this point. The group was made up of boys and girls in their mid-teens. We were talking about how much control parents should have over the coming and going of their young people, their young people's friends, their reading, their movie going, their social life generally.

The boy who made the comment developed his point.

"Unless before a person is 16 or so his parents have given him something to go on," he said, "It's too late to try to control him. We've got to learn what's right and wrong at least partly through our own experience. We'll make some mistakes, but they won't be too serious if our folks have given us the right ideas earlier. And if we do make mistakes, they shouldn't take an 'I-told-you-so' attitude, but should try to help us pick up the pieces."

You may not be able to accept this point of view in its entirety, but it's worth thinking about. Those young people, whose parents continue to try to direct them in everything they do, have a very difficult time in learning to stand on their own feet. Or they may rebel and go much more against the things which mother and father think are right than they otherwise would.

Australian Miners Return to Pits Monday

Sydney, Australia, Aug. 11 (U.P.).—The central executive of the Australian Miners Federation today ordered its 23,000 striking coal miners to return to work Monday.

The order, ending a seven-week strike, followed a vote yesterday in which the miners rejected Communist union leaders' demands that they continue the strike.

The Lyon's Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—William Goetz, production chief at Universal Pictures, was discussing some of the Hollywood executives and their quirks. "What kind of a man is Mervyn Leroy?" Goetz was asked . . . "The nervous, fidgety type," replied Goetz. "Leroy is the kind of a man who, when he enters his bedroom, opens the window if it's shut—or shuts the window if it's open."

Joe Yule, the father of Mickey Rooney, has been touring in "Finian's Rainbow." The show was about to close for a few weeks, and the closing date was on a Saturday. Yule approached the manager of the troupe, Rube Bernstein, and said he would like to leave on Thursday . . . "Mickey's being married on Friday," Yule explained, "and I want to get out there and see them—before Mickey gets another divorce."

"Jolson Sings Again," Tamara Shayne, who plays the role of Jolson's mother, is shown pasting newspaper clippings into a scrapbook. The scrapbook used in the movie is the actual one kept for Jolson by his late mother . . . The climax of the filmstory, incidentally, evolves around Jolson's complaint over being programm'd as the closing act at a benefit vaudeville show—and when his popularity is restored, he no longer has to appear as the closing act. In real life, however, Jolson never appears on any program unless he appears last. His rule always has been "Nobody follows Jolson."

Hildegarde visited the summer playhouse in Westport, Conn. She was on the lawn, before curtain-time, and suddenly felt she was losing her slip. It fell around her knees. Hildegarde quickly stepped out of the garment, picked it up and—and then blandly deposited it for safe-keeping in the pocket of Milton Diamond, the lawyer and senior member of the firm whose partners include Gov. Charles Poletti and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

300 Celanese Workers Return

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 11 (AP).—Approximately 300 furloughed workers have been called back to work at the local plant of the Celanese Corp. of America.

More than 5000 have been furloughed at the local plant. The upturn is in line with a recent announcement of Harold Blanche, Celanese president, that conditions are slightly improved.

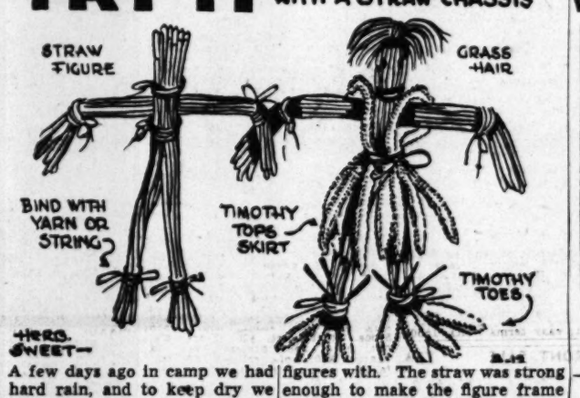
TRY IT

A GRASSY LASSIE WITH A STRAW CHASSIS



A few days ago in camp we had a hard rain, and to keep dry we climbed up into a big hay mow. The mow smelled warm and sweet with its tons and tons of dry hay stacked in bales on every side. We found that if we played running games the air became too dusty, so we started selecting hands full of long straight straw stems.

Using a little imagination we could see that it might be fun to make straw dolls, so we sent for several balls of string to bind the figures with. The straw was strong enough to make the figure frame work, so we bound the body and crossed and tied the arms as shown.

One camper costumed the doll's figure with timothy tops using them as a "grass skirt" and for forming toes on the feet. Any grasses can be used to make original dolls. Choose the grasses native to your countryside and make a "grassy Lassie."

TOMORROW—PULL OFF YOUR THUMB AND PUT IT BACK

BREACH OF PROMISE

Q. Anne and Bill met as colleagues in an office and fell in love. They became engaged, and set a wedding date, but Bill broke the engagement and married another girl. Anne sued for breach of promise; Bill's answer admitted the engagement, but claimed that Anne had admitted having been unchaste. He therefore asks that her suit be dismissed. She replies that even if what he says is true, it is not a good defense. Is she correct?

A. An engagement to marry was treated like other contracts until the passage of statutes in some States outlawing suits for breach of promise. Thus, upon failure to carry out a promise to marry, the one "backing out" was liable to be sued for damages. But it was—and is—a good defense to a breach of promise suit to prove that the suing party had been guilty of unchastity, unknown to the defendant at the time the engagement was made. But Bill's answer here does not say when Anne made the admission to him. Since the case would turn on whether it was before or after he asked her to marry him, Anne wins unless he amends his answer . . . F. L. D.

Cases discussed illustrate general principles. They should not be construed as legal advice in particular cases. Take your legal problems to your lawyer.

Help the Heart

Sometimes it seems the whole wide world . . . Is full of heart disease . . . And yet so few are interested . . . In finding remedies . . . I do not mean the doctors who . . . Are caring for the ill . . . And not the research specialists . . . Who struggle up the hill . . . But common people everywhere . . . Including you and I . . . Who know about our neighbors and . . . Our relatives that die . . . We should be so much more concerned . . . About each heart attack . . . Our hospitals and surgeons and . . . The money that they lack . . . We are the lucky folks on earth . . . who ought to do our part . . . By opening our pocketbooks . . . For every ailing heart.

THEIR WIVES ARE DIPLOMATS TOO . . .

Meet Washington's international hostesses, the ladies from other lands who have come here with their diplomat husbands. Theirs is no easy task—to take leading roles in Capital society, upholding the "party" side of the ambassadorial job.

Most of them are unusual women, though, as Elizabeth Maguire points out this Sunday in The Washington Post. She brings you word portraits of the best-known diplomatic wives—Madame Bonnet, Madame Koo, and others. You'll find it entertaining reading Sunday in Section IV.

ALSO IN SUNDAY'S POST

POLITICAL PARTNER

Time was when Emily Taft Douglas held the limelight for success in several careers—actress, author and Congresswoman. But except for one recent public appearance, she's been content lately to live in "retirement" as wife of the Senator from Illinois. Be sure to read Genevieve Reynolds' profile of this remarkable woman, another Sunday Section IV feature.

STREET SCENE

On the beach, she'd have been a welcome addition to the landscape. But walking down 14th st. near F, clad in a halter and shorts, she was a hazard to pedestrian navigation.

Every female eye swept expertly over the details of her skimpy outfit; every male head turned to follow her as she passed.

When he had recovered his power of speech, the fellow ahead of me turned to his companion and with a dubious shake of the head said:

"I dunno—if you and I dressed like that, we'd get locked up. Yes sir, the wagon would roll up and take us right out to Gallinger for observation."

MISCELLANY

"The other day your paper's fashion notes included a description of the latest style garment to be worn when one's bath is interrupted by a ringing phone," writes G. R. Cooley of 4317 15th st. nw. "Why not just let the phone ring?" . . . Mary Parker of 3911 Livingston st. complains that she hasn't been able to find any "musical buses" on the L route lately . . . James A. Campbell asked why the city didn't install a traffic light at 25th st. and Naylor rd. se. and I passed his question along to Traffic Director George E. Keneipp. After studying the intersection, Keneipp reports that it doesn't justify installation of a light, but that a four-way stop of traffic should help the rush-hour tangles . . . Our recent "Overheard" item about the lady who wanted an "osculating" fan reminds Hilda A. Hill of 920 T st. nw. of the American tourist couple she met in Rome. When they heard that Hilda was going to Naples, they said they'd just come from there, and she must be sure to take a ride on the "vernacular" . . . (Which is fairly close to "funicular," if you're not too particular about such things) . . . H. I. Bernard of 321 Massachusetts ave. ne., who works our Washington Post crossword puzzles in ink, finally got tripped up the other day—and had to send out an SOS for some ink eradicator . . . Mrs. Sophie Surprise of 1113 Penn st. nw. is startled to find in one of our afternoon contemporaries the sentence: "They rented a seven-room, one-bath, seven-story house." I suppose the construction workers got nosebleed trying to finish the place off with a back porch.

HURRY UP, LYNN

Eleven-year-old Lynn Liebschutz of 1222 S. 26th rd., Arlington, Va., has found some turtle eggs, and wants to know how to hatch them.

Zoo Director William M. Mann says that if you were a turtle, Lynn, you'd probably bury your eggs in the warm earth, and then wait as patiently as possible for 6 to 8 weeks. (Down in Florida, they bury their eggs on the beaches, above the tideline.)

However, Dr. Mann cautions that if an egg remains unburied for a week or so, it probably won't hatch. In other words, he's egging you on so that you won't waste any time in burying 'em.

Man Gets 12 Months; Flees Courthouse

Luray, Va. Aug. 11 (AP).—Police were looking early today for 20-year-old Wayne Comer, who jumped out of the court house window yesterday just after trial justice John H. Booton had said he would have to put up $1,000 bond or go to jail for 12 months for nonsupport of his wife.

Comer told the judge that he couldn't find work. Judge Booton replied that he would give him 12 months of hard work in jail.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Quirino's Visit Nettled Officials

By Robert S. Allen

Philippine President Elpidio Quirino received the customary formal amenities during his Washington visit but, privately, top officials breathed a sigh of relief when he departed.

Quirino

Reason was a gingerly handled situation that astonished and embarrassed them.

Three leading members of Quirino's party were prominent Jap collaborators and violent United States denouncers. They are:

Jose Yulo, chief justice of the Supreme Court in the Jap-created puppet government. Yulo was personally decorated by Emperor Hirohito for outstanding services to Japan. Yulo is now a member of Quirino's council of state.

Vicente Albano Pacis, leading collaborationist propagandist who poured out a steady stream of anti-American fulminations in the press and on the radio. He is press chief of Quirino's party.

President Quirino, personally, has an impeccable resistance record. His wife and other members of his family were killed by the Japs because of his steadfast refusal to collaborate. Friends explain the presence of the three collaborators in his party as due to "political necessity."

Quirino is seeking reelection this year in a very uncertain race. His leading opponent is Jose P. Laurel, who was president of the Jap puppet government. Despite his extreme collaborationist record, including a declaration of war against the United States, Laurel was freed from prison in an amnesty proclaimed by his close friend and fellow collaborationist, the late President Manuel Roxas. Another strong candidate opposing Quirino is Jose Avelino, wily Tammany-type politician.

Quirino's friends say his three collaborationist associates are giving important help in his reelection campaign. This is particularly true of Yulo, credited with being one of the smartest businessmen and best money raisers in the Philippines. Yulo is an intimate of Ambassador Joaquin M. Elizalde, who has represented his country in Washington off and on for a number of years. Elizalde is rated as the wealthiest man in the Philippines.

Finders Keepers

Washington State's Senators Warren G. Magnuson (D.) and Harry Cain (R.) are at bitter loggerheads over the Tacoma postmastership. Tacoma is Cain's home town and he is demanding the appointment for one of his adherents, William E. Patrick, former Army colonel. Magnuson is just as insistently supporting John MacMonagle, disabled veteran who has been acting postmaster for four years.

Cain took the controversy directly to Magnuson, saying, "I thought a Senator had the right to recommend the postmaster for his home town?"

"Perhaps so, in some cases," retorted Magnuson, "but in this case there are two strikes against you. One is that my man was originally recommended by the Congressman of his district and he has strong support in Tacoma. The other strike is that you Republicans are not in control this year as you were last. That makes a big difference, and that is why my man will get the appointment."

Unemployment Figures

Accuracy of the Census Bureau's last 4,100,000 unemployment report is sharply questioned by the Public Affairs Institute. According to Dr. Dewey Anderson, PAI director, the figure is low by at least 600,000.

Anderson also sharply challenges Commerce Secretary Sawyer's contention that increase in unemployment is due largely to the influx of young new workers looking for jobs. Anderson says the statistics don't bear that out.

"A comparison of changes in the labor force during May-June," he declares, "shows that 800,000 fewer young people became active job seekers this year than during the same period last year. The official unemployment figures are not realistic. Large numbers of jobless are not being taken into consideration for various technical reasons that don't hold water on examination."
